Tsaldaris Steps Aside For Coalition Government

Populist Leader Yields in Crisis; 'Neutral' Premier Will Guide Greece

U. S. Part 'Inevitable'

UNITED STATES INTERVENTION in the Greek political crisis was inevitable, writes M. W. Fodor. (Story on Page 7.)

Army Hero Mentioned

Athens, Greece, Aug. 27 (U.P.)—Former Premier Constantin Tsaldaris announced tonight that a coalition government would be formed tomorrow under a neutral premier.

Tsaldaris said the new premier-designate had been agreed upon by party leaders today, but he would not disclose his name. He said a full statement would be made later.

(Gen. Alexandris Papagos, hero of the campaign against the invading Italian army, was being mentioned for the post.)

Tsaldaris' announcement followed meetings with United States Ambassador Lincoln MacVeagh and Dwight Griswold, head of the American Aid Mission, both of whom urged Tsaldaris not to form a one-party government.

Leaders Meet with King

Yesterday, Tsaldaris insisted he would draw up a Populist cabinet if other party leaders failed to support him.

The most crushing blow to Tsaldaris' plans, it was believed, was delivered at a meeting today of six party leaders with King Paul. They informed the King they would not participate in any Tsaldaris-led government, but would back any other leader in whom "mutual confidence" was felt.

MacVeagh wrote Tsaldaris this morning to clear up a misunderstanding between the then Premier-designate and Griswold.

Broad Selections Urged

Tsaldaris said Griswold informed him their participation was "inadmissible." Griswold assured him he had said "inadvisable."

MacVeagh's letter today stressed the urgent need for a cabinet on broadest possible lines. It also urged Tsaldaris not to lose faith in American efforts in Greece.

Meanwhile, press reports said considerable guerilla concentrations had been observed in the Mount Kaimaktsalan area and clashes were reported in Thrace and Macedonia.

One leftist Athens newspaper said Monarchists executed 37 "Democrats," including women, and tossed their bodies in a well near Mani in the Peloponnesus.

Rankin Announces Candidacy for Bilbo Senate Seat

Tupelo, Miss., Aug. 27 (U.P.)—Representative John E. Rankin (D., Miss.), a white supremacy champion like the late Theodore G. Bilbo, announced his candidacy tonight for the Senate seat of his departed colleague.

Rankin said he would enter his name in the November 4 special election.

The 65-year-old Mississippi Representative since 1920 issued a statement couched in phrases that Bilbo might have written himself.

"There has never been a time when we needed men of experience and ability in the United States Senate more than we do today to fight against those vicious influences that not only threaten the safety of the South, but threaten the very life of the Nation as well," Rankin said.

Two other candidates have announced for Bilbo's seat. They were Circuit Judge John Stennis of DeKalb and State Supreme Court Clerk Tom Q. Ellis.

An expected candidate is Representative William M. Colmer, who was recently endorsed by Mississippi's largest newspaper, the Jackson Daily News.

Short prices for southern Maryland tobacco will force the closing of three markets at Upper Marlboro and the three at Hughesville after Friday's sales.

This was announced last night by Frank Hall, chairman of the warehouse committee of the Warehousemen's Association of Southern Maryland following a meeting at Upper Marlboro.

Warehouses at La Plata and Waldorf have been ordered closed after Monday's sale, Hall said. Tobacco will be received at the Marlboro warehouses through Friday, he said.

Tobacco prices have been declining sharply the past several days. In addition, tobacco buyers have been unable to move purchased tobacco from the floors of the warehouses because most of the packing labor has gone to the Carolinas, where the markets are open.

The average tobacco price in Maryland last week was $7.23 a hundred pounds less than for the previous week.

Boyd Sworn As Lewis Hits Truman, Krug

Recess Appointment As Bureau of Mines Head Revives Feud

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A blast in the United Mine Workers Journal yesterday revived John L. Lewis' feud with the Administration and ruffled the comparative quiet on the coal front.

The Journal, Lewis' official mouthpiece, lashed out at both President Truman and Interior Secretary Julius A. Krug for the recess appointment of James Boyd to be Director of the Bureau of Mines.

Boyd, former dean of the Colorado School of Mines, meanwhile, was sworn in as director at ceremonies in the office of Secretary Krug.

Said the editorial in the United Mine Workers Journal:

"President Truman seems to have a happy faculty for pulling a boner just when things are rolling along easy for him and his political standing appears to be on the upsurge. This time the President has gone out of his way once again to antagonize the men who man American coal mines."

Boyd first was appointed last March. Lewis went before the Senate Public Lands Committee to oppose confirmation. He charged lack of experience in the coal industry and challenged Boyd's "competence" for the job. He said the post required a practical man.

The Senate Public Lands Committee approved the nomination but the Senate left it hanging fire when Congress adjourned.

At yesterday's swearing in ceremonies, Krug struck indirectly at Lewis by praising Boyd as the "most competent man in the United States" for the job. He described the appointment as a triumph for the Interior Department in "another long and bitter battle."

Following the ceremonies Boyd told newsmen he had been "promised a fight" when the President resubmits his nomination to the Senate for confirmation next year.

The United Mine Workers Journal editorial said Senator Hugh Butler (R., Nebr.), chairman of the Senate Public Lands group, "personally telephoned Mr. Boyd and told him that he could not be confirmed." Senator Butler was out of town yesterday and his office declined comment.

Krug, who administered the mines during Government ownership, signed the disputed contract with Lewis and was key man in the President's successful court fight to return miners to their jobs, was especially singled out for attack in the UMW organ.

It charged Boyd was "resigned to the fact that he could not secure confirmation" and was about to

President, Family Fly to Rio Sunday

Party Will Spend Six Days in Brazil, Attend Celebration, Return on Missouri

Treaty Approved in Main

HEART of the Treaty of Rio de Janeiro wins full committee approval as U. S. presses for pole-to-pole security zone. (Story on Page 8.)

Overnight Stop Planned

President Truman and an official party of 15 will take off Sunday morning for Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, the White House announced last night.

Mr. Truman has agreed to extend his sojourn in Rio to six days so that he can join in celebrating the 125th anniversary of Brazil's independence from Portugal. The celebration will take place Sunday, September 7.

The Chief Executive, Mrs. Bess Truman, Miss Margaret Truman, and other members of the official party, will fly to Rio in the new presidential plane, the Independence.

It will be Mr. Truman's first journey aboard this speedy craft. Lieut. Col. Henry T. (Hank) Myers, erstwhile pilot of the old Sacred Cow, will be at the controls.

President Truman will address the Inter-American Conference on Tuesday, preliminary to the signing of a defense pact by the republics of the Western Hemisphere.

On the way to Rio, the Presidential party will stop at Trinidad and will spend Sunday night at Waller Field. A refueling stop will be made Monday at Belem, Brazil. The plane is scheduled to arrive in Rio that afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The return trip, which will be made aboard the battleship Missouri, is scheduled to start Sunday night, after the celebration of Brazil's Fourth of July. That celebration is expected to be a particularly gala one this time because of the presence of Mr. Truman and the fact that the United States was the first nation to recognize Brazilian independence.

White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said last night that the question of whether the Missouri would stop at San Juan, Puerto Rico, or any place else on the return voyage, had not yet been settled.

The Independence is scheduled to take off for Rio at 9 o'clock Sunday morning.

Aboard, in addition to President Truman, the First Lady and Miss Truman, will be Brazilian Ambassador Carlos Martins and Mme. Martins, White House Secretaries Ross, William D. Hassett and Matthew J. Connelly; Clark Clifford, special counsel to the President; John R. Steelman, assistant to the President; Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, the military aide, and

ATA to Survey Landing Systems At Chief Airports

A two-phase, 13,300-mile flight tour to check landing systems at the country's principal commercial airports will be launched today from the Washington National Airport by the Air Transport Association.

The purpose is to check the current operational status of more than 50 Civil Aeronautics Administration "instrument landing system" (I. L. S.) installations.

The joint C. A. A. A.-A. T. A. ground controlled approach (G. C. A.) radar sets now under experimental operation at Washington, Chicago and La Guardia Field also will be flight-tested by the A. T. A.'s DC-3 flying laboratory and its crew of experts from the A. T. A.'s air navigation-traffic control division.

On a similar survey conducted by the A. T. A. last February, numerous discrepancies were discovered. These subsequently were corrected.

Veto 'Tampering' Will Wreck U. N., Soviet Delegate Warns

Lake Success, N. Y., Aug. 27 (U.P.)—Russia warned bluntly tonight that "hot-headed" attempts to tamper with the Big Five veto power could wreck the United Nations.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko delivered the warning in the U. N. Security Council as small-nation delegates renewed their assault on the big power voting privilege and the United States lashed out at Russia's frequent use of that privilege.

"Some hotheads have tried to arrive at a modification or liquidation of the veto," Gromyko declared. "These attempts will continue but they shall not prevail if we want to continue the United Nations and want to preserve the United Nations Organization and work for continuance and strengthening of the organization within its framework."

With the big powers ready to fight together against any real attempt at altering the U. N. Charter's veto provision, the Council produced a preview of the veto debate slated to explode next month in the 55-nation U. N. General Assembly.

The fight began with these developments:

1. Council President Faris el Khouri of Syria, said that if the Council thought it could do anything about the veto issue, it might suggest that the Big Five renounce their special voting privilege in everything but actual cases involving threats to peace, breaches of peace or acts of aggression.

For 'National Survival'

Truman Research Board Chief Urges Two-Billion-a-Year Goal

Steelman Presents 59-Page Report on Survey of 10 Months

By The Associated Press

A proposal that the Nation spend more than two billion dollars a year by 1957 for scientific research as a major factor "in national survival" was made yesterday in a report to President Truman.

Asserting "the security and prosperity of the United States depend today, as never before, upon the rapid extension of scientific knowledge" John R. Steelman, chairman of the President's Scientific Research Board in a 59-page document declared:

"A nation which is backward in fundamental scientific knowledge—which falls behind others in the exploration of the unknown—would be severely handicapped in any future war."

The report, prepared by Steelman after a 10-month survey during which he consulted with the 15-man board, declared:

"It is commonly said that another war would be fought with pushbuttons; that developments in electronics and other areas will lead to the development of completely automatic weapons. This is altogether likely.

"While such developments lie some years in the future, there is no reason to suppose that they are

Technical Gains Seen Vital to U. S.

The scientific report to President Truman yesterday cited the case of England in contending that future American prosperity depends on continuing advances in technology.

England's lag in that respect, the report stated, helped upset the balance of power in Europe and bring on the two great wars of this century.

The report said Europe now replacing factories destroyed in the war, soon will possess a more modern industrial plant than the United States. It added:

"What may be the significance of this fact can be illustrated by the unhappy experience of England during our lifetime. Since the turn of the century, the British have been paying, in terms of technological obsolescence, the penalty for their early industrial leadership.

"Particularly in the basic industries, British facilities and technology were older and less efficient than their German counterparts. The balance of power in Europe was upset primarily as a result of this fact, and the world was plunged into two devastating wars.

"Today, one of the most serious long-term problems still facing the British government is the modernization of industrial facilities."

U. S. to Begin More Direct Aid to Europe

State Dept. Aides Fly to Paris to Talk to Clayton

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

From now on the United States will take a more direct part in helping non-Soviet Europe to draft a reconstruction program, Acting Secretary of State Lovett indicated yesterday.

He reminded his press conference of Secretary Marshall's statement at Harvard June 5 that "the role of this country should consist of friendly aid in the drafting of a European program and of later support of such a program so far as it may be practical for us to do so."

The 16-nation talks at Paris have progressed to such a point, said Lovett, that it was not unreasonable to expect the Europeans to turn to Washington for such "friendly aid." His chief policy planner, George F. Kennan, and his special assistant, Charles Bonesteel, were flying to Paris yesterday for urgent consultations with Undersecretary Will Clayton, who is already there.

Other efforts yesterday to meet the mounting European economic crisis were these:

1. Italy formally applied for a 250 million-dollar reconstruction loan from the World Bank, a step foreshadowed ever since Italy joined the bank many months ago.

British Curb Traveling and Reduce Rations

Drastic Restrictions Ordered to Prevent Economic Collapse

London, Aug. 27 (INS).—Britain ordered today a virtual end to pleasure and holiday travel and further reductions in already slim food rations in a drastic new austerity program designed to save the country from economic collapse.

In some instances the new food rations are lower than the nation was forced to endure in wartime.

The severe new measures, aimed at saving Britain 912 million dollars yearly, include:

1. A ban, effective October 1, on all holiday travel abroad.

2. Abolition on October 1 of all gasoline rations for pleasure driving.

3. Reduction of the meat ration for all Britons from 24 cents to 20 cents worth weekly.

4. Reduction of supplies to higher-priced restaurants by from 15 to 18 per cent.

The restrictions constitute a major effort to close the dollar gap between imports and exports.

Even with these and previously announced restrictions it is estimated that an annual import-export gap of about $1,600,000,000 will remain.

The measures were declared to have been designed carefully to have a minimum effect on workers.

Judge Raedy To Enter Plea Of Innocence

Faces Court Today; Wants Early Trial But King Would Wait for Witnesses

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Municipal Court Judge Ellen K. Raedy is scheduled to appear before another woman jurist, Judge Nadine L. Gallagher, today at 10 a. m. to plead not guilty to hit-and-run charges.

Judge Raedy's newly hired attorney, Charles E. Ford, said yesterday that the judge would plead not guilty to charges of "leaving after colliding" with a parked car on August 19.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark F. King, acting with the approval of Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, yesterday filed the formal information on the case charging Judge Raedy:

With having operated a vehicle "and having done substantial damage to property therewith did fail to stop and give assistance, together with her name, place of residence, including street and number, and the name and address of the owner of the vehicle so operated to the owner of such property so damaged or to the operator of such other vehicle and did fail to report said accident to a police station or to a police officer immediately."

Subject to Fine, Jail

Conviction on the charge for first offenders carries a maximum sentence of $100 fine or 30 days in jail, or both, King said. Police records indicate no previous traffic convictions for the 44-year-old jurist.

King, said that if asked, he will recommend acceptance of personal bond as bail, although this is a matter at the discretion of the court.

The judge has maintained her innocence on the charge and reiterated her belief that her car was driven by a friend, who has not been located as yet. Her attorney, Ford, said he would seek an early trial.

King, who has been assigned to prosecute the case by West, said that he would prefer to have the trial postponed "until I have a chance to talk to the missing witnesses who attended the birthday party" at 909 1st st. nw., which Judge Raedy has been reported to have attended. The judge denied being present at the party—located 200 feet from the accident scene.

Police Seeking Three Witnesses

Lieut. William Liverman of the Police Accident Investigation Unit said his men were still trying to locate Mrs. Mary E. Hayes, hostess at the party; Mrs. Mamie Hayes of 62 I st. nw, who was said to have attended the party, and Jimmy Frisby, 13-year-old son of Municipal Court clerk in whose honor the party was held.

'Board of Health Steak Inspectors' Eat Well—Free

St. Joseph, Mo., Aug. 27 (AP).—The Board of Health let it be known today that it had no "steak inspectors."

It reported that at least two women have been visiting eating houses recently, announcing they were steak inspectors for the health board and ordering the most expensive meals in order to determine if the steaks were "up to standard."

In some cases, the proprietors said, the reports of the "inspectors" were unflattering.

State police reported three men with a dump truck raided a farm in Rio Arriba County, and made off with a quarter acre of peppers—the stuff that makes chili con carne so hot.

Held 'Industrial'

Quoddy DP Plan Set Back By U. S. Refusal to Cut Price

Eastport, Me., Aug. 27 (AP).—Eastport's plan to convert Quoddy Village into a displaced-persons industrial training center tonight was ruled ineligible by War Assets Administration for "public benefit allowances," a vital financial factor in the municipality's bid for the property.

City officials had hoped to acquire the village, a Government surplus property, valued at $396,055, for far below that amount because of the nature of the plan for its use.

WAA's stand was made known in a closed meeting at the village of seven Federal officials, among them Robert Whittet, WAA's director of the nonindustrial real property division, and city representatives.

After the conference, a joint statement was issued which said an analysis by WAA and advisory agencies had found the plan to be "essentially industrial rather than educational in character."

City officials planned to seek further WAA consideration in a Washington meeting which will be called when an amended bid is made.

Under the city's proposal, the village that cost one million dollars would be acquired by it and then placed under supervision of a syndicate headed by Frank E. Cohen, New York and Philadelphia tractor manufacturer, for training of European displaced persons.

The DP's would not be paid wages and after six months training, would be sent to South America. Their production, tractors and other implements, also would be exported to South America.

Realty Boards Indicted for Price Fixing

Ex-Policeman Held

20 Arrested In Gambling Raids Here

A former Metropolitan police vice squad member was charged with lottery law violations last night.

He was seized in a police dragnet about 7 p. m. following six gambling raids earlier in the day which netted 19 arrests.

The former cop who resigned in 1944 was booked at the First Precinct Station as Paul Clifton Lewis, 32, of 3718 S. 3rd st., Arlington, Va.

Lewis was accused of operating a lottery, possession of lottery slips and conspiracy to violate the District lottery laws. He was arrested at 17th and Corcoran sts. nw. by two vice squad detectives.

Fourteen Are Charged

In the raids yesterday, six of those arrested were released as more or less innocent bystanders. Lewis and 13 others were to appear today before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

All persons under arrest were part of the same organization, Lieut. Roy Blick, chief of the vice squad, said. Blick described Lewis as "boss" of the group.

"It is the beginning of a major effort to get the big shot as well as the little man," Blick said. "We determined that these people were all members of one numbers gang led by one man and that is how we were able to place a conspiracy charge against them."

Twelve of the prisoners, including two women, were charged with conspiracy to violate the numbers law, possession of numbers slips, and operating a lottery.

In addition, Henry Morris, 39, of 1110 North Capitol st., was charged with permitting gaming.

Lewis' record showed that he was a policeman from July, 1936 to 1944. He had been a member of Local 22, Washington Stage Hands Union. He was released on $1500 bond.

Magazine Shop Raided

While the all-day raids were in progress, Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett told a reporter of The Washington Post he did "not know of any large bookmaking establishment in town."

"I know of no place in town where they have an established crap game," said Barrett "or where you can place a bet on a horse, or where you can receive a report on the races for your bet."

As for numbers gambling, he said: "There are no headquarters here for traffic of (numbers) receipts to Maryland."

"I don't expect to clean up gambling here," he added. "No one can do that, but we can keep it down."

Blick said Lewis was identified at a raid in a magazine shop at 702 T st. nw.

Eight were picked up but six were later released. Blick said that when police approached "we heard some one say 'uh-uh' and the clang of a safe being locked."

Locksmith Opens Safe

Julius A. (Buzz) Lee, 39, 2229 1st st. nw., Blick declared, "asked me did I mind if he called his Boss up."

"I told him—go ahead."

Lee called the name of his boss and asked if it was all right to allow police to get into the safe, Blick said.

While police listened, Blick said, the Boss said "No."

A locksmith opened the safe in five minutes while police checked the telephone number. Inside the safe, said Blick, were numbers tickets and several hundred dollars.

Also charged with Lee in the arrests at that place was Charles

Move Surprises Both Associations; Comment Withheld For Time Being

By Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporter

The Washington Real Estate Board and the national Association of Real Estate Boards were indicted here yesterday on a charge of fixing prices in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

The Government simultaneously filed a civil action against the Washington Board, the National Association and 16 individuals asking that they be perpetually enjoined from "further engaging in . . . said conspiracy."

Nelson

The individuals named in the civil suit are Herbert U. Nelson, executive vice president of the National Association, and 15 members and directors of the Washington Board who are:

Charles H. Hillegeist, who is also president of the board; J. Garrett Beitzell, Lewis T. Breuninger, Lewis F. Colbert, S. Dolan Donohoe, Edward K. Jones, William L. Lebling, S. Miles Montgomery, F. Moran McConihe, William L. Orem, jr., Thomas W. Sandoz, J. Hawley Smith, Raymond M. Taylor, DeVere R. Weedon and Carey Winston.

All Prominent Locally

All of the Washington board directors named are prominent local realtors.

Yesterday's indictment and civil suit came as a surprise. The July grand jury sitting in Municipal Court had been listening to testimony since a week ago yesterday.

Interest in the investigation had been diverted by the more recently launched probe into alleged price fixing by the gasoline industry. The latter investigation is taking place before the reconvened April grand jury.

The action apparently came as a shock to both the Washington board and the national association. Nelson, the executive vice president of the latter organization, flew back to Washington from New York when informed of the development. Both groups withheld immediate comment.

May Shift Its Guns

And there were definite signs that the Justice Department, now that the grand jury has considered the case against the realtors, intends to shift its guns to cover the whole range of housing, such as building materials and construction.

In the indictment handed up to District Court Justice Richmond B. Keech, the July grand jury cites "various persons not made defendants" who "participated as co-conspirators with the defendants."

These persons, said the indictment, include "(a) those who have been officers and members of the Washington board and individuals who, from time to time, acted as the representatives of the members in meetings and other activities of the Washington board, and (b) those who have been officers, directors and members of committees of the national association."

Is a Short Beer For Baby Legal? Board Asks West

Is it legal for a 27-month-old baby to have a short beer in a District tavern?

That was the question puzzling the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday after a policeman reported he saw two normal size beers and a "junior" brew delivered to a table where two adults and the infant were sitting.

Alan W. Payne, ABC chairman, said he had asked Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West for a legal opinion on the case. West recently ruled it was legal for children to have drinks if they were first ordered, served to, and paid for by adults.

Payne said in this case the policeman reported the small beer was delivered directly to the child.

Area Students Run Homemade Craft Into Target Ground

Sailing a frail, homemade, 14-foot sailboat 150 miles—and passing through Navy gunfire while doing so—was all part of a vacation to two Greater Washington youths.

Very calm about the whole thing are James Schultz, 17, of 27 Philadelphia ave., Takoma Park, and Robbin Vierling, 18, of 507 Harding drive, Silver Spring.

According to young Schultz, who will be a senior at Coolidge High School this fall, they sailed into an unmarked Navy target area of Solomon's Island while gun crews were practicing.

"We weren't very scared of the firing, though," Schultz said, adding that firing ceased as soon as the Navy men saw them.

The boys began their cruise from Scientists' Cliff, about two miles from Fort Republic, Md., last Wednesday, and tied up at the Capitol Yacht Club here Monday evening.

Schultz said he and Vierling had been vacationing at Scientit's Cliff and decided to return to Washington in Schultz's two-year-old, kayak type, $90 sailboat. The boat is made of canvas stretched over a wooden frame, and carries a 15-foot sail.

Their carried their own food, cooking at night over open fires on beaches where they rested.

Easton, Md., Aug. 27 (AP).—An unorganized work stoppage by tomato skinners in Talbot County's packing plants came to an end today when their wages were increased to 20 cents a bucket.

Frank Shook, secretary of the Tri-State Packers' Association, said virtually all of the county's 16 canneries had come to terms with the workers today.

The seasonal laborers, who are not unionized, walked off the job at some plants yesterday and Monday with an assertion that skinners in neighboring Dorchester County were geting 20 cents a bucket while they received only 15 to 17 cents.

The settlement pattern was set today when Harrison & Jarboe, one of the largest tomato canners in the United States, agreed to the 20-cent demand.

Some of the Talbot County plants employ as many as 150 skinners and the total number of workers affected was estimated at 900 to 1000.

The work stoppage complicated an already acute situation caused by the fact that a bumper crop in Maryland's six tomato-producing counties has hit the market all at once instead of being spread over eight or nine weeks.

Growers were bringing in many more tomatoes than the canneries could possibly handle and farmers with loads of ripe fruit were being turned back even after offering to sell for 20 cents a basket. The price last year was 75 cents to $1 a basket.

Carilloneurs Name Price As New Leader

Luray, Va., Aug. 27 (AP).—Carilloneurs interrupted their "postman's holiday" round of recitals today long enough to elect Percival Price of the University of Michigan president of their National Congress of Carilloneurs.

Dr. Ray Wingate of Alfred University, N. Y., was named vice president and others were re-elected at an afternoon business session here.

They were Melvin Corbett of Danbury, Conn., secretary-treasurer; Robert Donnell, Ottawa, Canada, musical adviser; Frank L. Johnson, Concord, N. H., librarian, and Mrs. Charles S. Musser, Lansdowne, Pa., adviser on public relations.

Price, in addition to being chosen president, today delivered a paper on the writing of music for carillons and closed the three-day annual meeting with a recital at 9 p. m.

In the late afternoon, Ernest Parsons of Morristown, Pa., had moved to the keyboard to start the last group of concerts. He was followed by Herman Dreher of Ontario, Canada, and Emil Vendette, of Englise de St. Jean Baptiste, Ottawa.

U. S. to Mediate Md. Rail Dispute

By The Associated Press

The National Mediation Board said yesterday it would name a mediator soon to determine whether to call a collective bargaining election among the 532 workers on the Western Maryland Railway.

District 50, the catch-all unit of John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers, now has the bargaining rights for employes of the road. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers once represented the workers, but lost that right in a strike more than 25 years ago.

Now the Brotherhood of Firemen and Enginemen, an independent, is challenging District 50's majority on the road, and has petitioned the mediation board for an election.

A mediator will investigate the brotherhood's claims before recommending that the board direct an election, an official of the agency explained.

U. S. Payments To Md. Farms Cut $906,000

By Fred Zusy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Maryland will receive approximately $2,855,000 in Federal payments and loans under five agriculture programs for the year ending next July 1, or $906,000 less than the preceding year.

The figures cover funds for soil conservation, school lunches, forest fire prevention and farm tenant and production and subsistence loans.

They do not include the Rural Electrification Administration program which has authorized more than $2,300,000 in construction by two cooperatives.

The REA said the Southern Maryland Electric Cooperative, Inc., at Waldorf and the Choptank Electric Cooperative, Inc., at Denton, together plan building programs with total expenditures of between $500,000 and one million dollars, depending on availability of materials.

About 70 per cent of farms in the State are now electrified, the REA said.

Soil Funds Slashed

The figures for soil conservation are only approximate. These payments are based on the calendar year beginning January 1, while appropriations by Congress are made for the fiscal year beginning July 1. The 1946 payments for the department are available only in rough form.

Broken down by programs, this is how Federal funds shape up for the State:

Soil conservation: This agency allotted the State $2,046,000 on January 1 for 1948, but this was slashed to $1,616,000 after Congress in June reduced the amount available nationally from 265 million dollars to 235 million dollars.

School lunches: A total of $596,157 has been set aside tentatively for the 1948 fiscal year, which began last July 1, including $497,832 for public schools and $98,325 for private schools.

More Forest Fire Funds

Forest fire prevention: The State has been allotted $110,000 this year, against $82,333 last year. Total cost of the program in the State is estimated at $220,010, the State bearing the remainder of the cost.

Farm tenant loans: Obligations last year to farmers wanting to buy the land they had been working as non-owners totaled $368,937. Contemplated 1948 distribution is $100,000.

Production and subsistence loans: 1947 obligations on these loans, intended to aid farmers in changing from one type of farming to another, amounted to $618,982. The 1948 program calls for $432,800.

Rural electrification: No additional funds have been set aside as yet for 1948 State programs. However, the Waldorf co-op previously was allocated a total of $3,012,500 to construct 1465 miles of line to serve 7256 consumers and the Denton organization was allocated a total of $3,031,000 to build 2229 miles of line to serve 6704 consumers.

Dead Horse on Lawn

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Mealy of Fairland, Md., chased off their permises early yesterday a horse which had wandered into their front yard. When the Mealy couple returned home late yesterday, the same horse was under a tree in the front yard—dead. Silver Spring police were trying to locate the owner of the animal.

Montgomery Farms Toured By Experts

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

Several trim and prosperous Montgomery County farms were under the close scrutiny yesterday of 40 experts in the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, who were led on a tour by the Maryland University Extension Service.

From the 583-acre farm of W. C. Hanson, near Gaithersburg, where an Aberdeen Angus livestock herd was observed, to the soil erosion control methods employed by Columnist Drew Pearson on his farm near Potomac, the technicians representing 25 different countries throughout the world liked what they saw.

They were most impressed, they said, by the cleanliness of the American farms and the "big scale" of farming made possible by mechanization.

Labor Saving Impresses

A woman who was in a Nazi concentration camp as well as having served as a slave laborer and taken an active part in the Warsaw uprising, was most impressed with labor saving devices employed.

She was Mrs. Maria Czezniewska, who recalled that in her native Poland most farms are not much larger than 12 acres requiring a large family to keep up with the work. On the tour she saw the 263-acre farm of T. A. Barnsley, near Olney, Md., which is farmed only by Barnsley's son, J. M. with the aid of two hired men.

Many in the group of foreign experts that included economists, statisticians and nutritionists in FAO which is trying to stabilize and relieve world food conditions, were in occupied countries during the war.

A Swiss native was surprised to see corn fodder being stored in a silo pointing out that in his country sugar beets and potatoes are used for silage or cattle feed.

A family partnership arrangement in the family of Edwin D. Fry, near Laytonsville, Md., interested the FAO staff members who were also told that Mrs. Fry was a city girl who first came to the county during World War I as a "farmerette" to relieve the manpower shortage.

Mrs. Valentine Preobrajenski, a Russian born woman who speaks six languages fluently, and was detained in Italy by the Nazis because she was not a collaborator, could only say she was "very impressed."

Loud in their praises of American farming methods, some of the "sightseers, however, emphasized methods employed here would not work in their native countries.

One attractive European handling Eastern Europe affairs for FAO said she was impressed with the model farms but she would like to see a submarginal farm. "There must be some in America," she declared.

4 Spurn Idea To Quit Race In Arlington

Four of the five candidates for the Arlington County Board who were asked to withdraw from the race to strengthen the position of two other aspirants turned a cold shoulder to the proposal yesterday.

The candidates, Jacob Bechtel, Lincoln Mackey, Millard P. Davis and Robert W. Gaines, all said they would remain in the race despite a suggestion that their withdrawal would help defeat the two "machine-supported" incumbents, F. Freeland Chew and Harry W. Cuppett.

Lawson Wimberly, the fifth candidate, asked to withdraw, could not be reached for comment.

The suggestion that they quit the race came from Mrs. Charles Planck, a former candidate, who withdrew last month to throw her support behind Mrs. Florence Cannon and T. Oscar Smith, nominees of the Arlington Better Government League.

Mrs. Planck contended that a slate of nine candidates for the two board seats would split the vote so wide that the "machine" candidates would be assured of re-election. She urged the five to withdraw in favor of the Better Government League's nominees because, she contended, candidates supported by an organized and compact group "would have a better chance."

None of the five men asked to withdraw is supported by any county group, Mrs. Planck said.

"As things stand today," Mrs. Planck declared in an open letter, "we are headed straight for a machine victory in the county board election in November."

In calling on the candidates to throw their support to the league-supported nominees, she stated:

"All of you want Chew and Cuppett out or you wouldn't be running. What each of you must decide is whether you, personally, want them out badly enough to withdraw and help the two strongest among you do the ousting."

Mrs. Planck withdrew from the race along with William E. Day and H. E. Howe after the Better Government League indorsed the candidates of Smith and Mrs. Cannon.

Virginia Economist Urges End To Many Farming Controls

Fontana Village, N. C., Aug. 27. (AP).—Wilson Gee, University of Virginia professor of rural social economics, today told the National Rural Sociological Society that a sincere and serious attempt should be made to rid agriculture of many Government controls and return it as free private enterprise to the American farmer.

"This return to free private enterprise should be made," Dr. Gee said, "in spite of the fact that there is widespread sentiment on the part of a large segment of farm population for continuance of measures which they reason bring them more certain security than they have been accustomed to enjoy heretofore.

Depression Fear Cited

"Farmers still are afflicted by 'shell-shock' lingering from the long depression of agriculture after World War I. Farmers are in a measure doped, or acclimated to the Government's paying them to do what they should do anyway. Perhaps as a result of economic pressure they would do better themselves than under Government aegis.

"Farmers, just as businessmen and the public generally, are greatly influenced by fear of the consequences of another depression like or worse than the last one. But to live always in the fear of tragedy can prove to be the best way to invite it.

"Certainly it is the part of wisdom to be prepared for depression. Any program for agriculture or for business must include a positive program to meet the situation promptly if and when depression comes. But to live timorously, day after day, constantly under the shadow of the fear of depression, is not to live courageously nor in the true tradition of either American agriculture or business.

22 Farben Industry Heads Go on Trial

Defendants Flayed By U. S. Prosecutor As Coldblooded Type

By Edwin Hartrich

Nuernberg, Aug. 27.—Twenty-four leading officials of the giant I. G. Farben industrial empire went on trial today before the United States war crimes tribunal here, charged with major responsibility for instigating World War II, wholesale enslavement, plunder and murder.

Brig. Gen. Telford Taylor, of Washington, D. C., chief of counsel for war crimes, opened the case with the prosecution's keynote, "There is no laughter in this case, neither is there any hate."

Speaking in the same courtroom where Hermann Goering and outstanding Nazi leaders were tried as war criminals last year, General Taylor emphasized that "the crimes of these men were not committed in rage, nor under the stress of sudden tmptation. One does not build a stupendous war machine in a fit of passion, nor an Auschwitz slave factory during a passing spasm of brutality."

Pointing to the two rows of defendants sitting solemnly in the prisoners' dock under the bright lights, he declared: "What these men did was done withe utmost deliberation and would be repeated if the opportunity should recur . . . God gave us this earth to be cultivated as a garden and not to be turned into a stinking pile of rubble and refuse."

General Taylor then described haw the I. G. Farbenindustries, chemical and dyestuffs combine with international connections around the world, took the initiative in helping Germany to rearm under Hitler and to strengthen the Nazi regime.

Drexel A. Sprecher, assistant prosecutor, described detailys of the "Karinhall" plan evolved in July 1936 by leading defendant Karl Krauch, chairman of the supervisory board of directors, together with Goering, then head of the four-year plan. This plan, described as an important phase of preparing for aggressive warfare, provided for increased production of poison gas, explosives, rubber and gasoline.

Sprecher described Farben's world-wide espionage network as even better than ones possessed by the Wehrmacht. He also described how Farben used its international contracts to hamper development of war potentials of countries which might become enemies of the Third Reich.

At Hamburg

Casualties Feared in Landing Jews

Gibraltar, Aug. 27 (U.P.).—One Jewish leader aboard the three British transports taking some 4500 refugees to Hamburg predicted today that there will be "many casualties" when the refugees are forced to land at the British-controlled German port.

The three transports stopped here to take on coal and supplies for the voyage to Hamburg after the refugees refused to land in France, whence they started on an unsuccessful attempt to enter Palestine illegally.

"We would rather jump overboard than enter the country where we have suffered so much," one of the leaders aboard the Ocean Vigour told visiting correspondents.

The leader insisted there would be no organized resistance against attempts to land them by force "because we are too weak for that and almost annihilated."

France Will Admit Refugees

Paris, Aug. 27 (AP).—Parliamentary sources said today that France had replied favorably to Britain's request that the Jewish refugees of the Exodus be admitted to France by rail after they are landed, at Hamburg in the British zone of Germany.

London dispatches said British officials at Hamburg had been ordered to keep all Germans away from the docks when the Jews are landed because of possible "unpredictable psychological effects" on the Jews. The British foreign office was reported making preparations for newspaper reporters to witness the disembarkation.

Immigration Plan Studied

Geneva, Switzerland, Aug. 27 (U.P.).—Informed sources said today that the United Nations special committee on Palestine was studying a subcommittee recommendation to send 150,000 Jewish refugees to Palestine in the next two years.

The immigration would be carried out during a transition period which would also be utilized to study the proposed partition of the Holy Land into Arab and Jewish states.

Agreement Ends Fight Over Ditch

A one-man revolt which for two days had blocked construction of a sewage ditch in a Falls Church subdivision ended on amicable terms yesterday.

E. C. Peterson had single-handedly halted the project by parking his automobile in the path of a steam shovel that was digging the ditch across his lot on the 200 block of N. Noland st.

Yesterday, he came out with a moral victory—although work on the sewer will be resumed today.

As a result of a conference between lawyers for both sides, Peterson agreed to move his automobile, but only after other developers of the nearby subdivision agreed to reimburse him and other property owners for the sewer right-of-way in that sector. The amount of the settlement was not disclosed.

The Peterson automobile, which had sat stubbornly in front of the steam shovel since 4:30 a. m. Tuesday, was moved yesterday about 4 p. m.

Peterson staged his coup after workmen had started the shovel across his property despite his protests that he had not given his permission. Other nearby property owners, who had not previously objected, came to his support yesterday when they learned he had decided to fight the alleged encroachment.

A E. Smith, original owner of all the property along the block, contended he had retained control of right-of-way when the subdivision plans were approved by the town of Falls Church. The controversy, however, was described as "friendly disagreement," and the entire proceedings were conducted in a spirit of good humor.

As a result of the compromise, a trespassing warrant sworn out by Peterson against Jack Goddard, contractor in charge of the sewage project, will be withdrawn, it was said.

Gov. Dewey Urges Food To Fight Communism

Rhinebeck, N. Y., Aug. 27 (U.P.).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey called upon farmers today to produce food as the world's most effective weapon against "Communism and other dictatorships."

He told several thousand visitors to the Duchess County Fair that the ideologies of war-stricken countries, two years after VJ-Day, still depend largely on food.

Will Cut Imports

Canberra, Aug. 27 (AP).—A government source said today Australia would make big cuts in imports of tobacco, moviesand newsprint from America as a first series in import restrictions designed to save 10 million dollars in the financial year ending June 30, 1948.

Station Lifts Camera Ban, With Apology

Washington Terminal Co., operators of Union Station here, yesterday apologized to local newspapers and promised news photographers future free access to company property.

The cause was its employes' refusal Tuesday night to permit picture-taking of the wreck of two switching engines just outside the station trainsheds. One news photographer who snapped a picture anyway was promptly arrested for disorderly conduct.

Bernard R. Tolson, terminal general manager, termed the employes' action as "just plain stupid," said he would look into the incident thoroughly, and promised it wouldn't happen again.

Eugene S. Jones, photographer for The Washington Post and first cameraman to reach the scene, was forced to check his camera at at station master's office. Other photographers, who entered by a different route, were stopped by station guards and ordered not to take pictures.

Irwin Tress, Times-Herald cameraman who ignored the order, was arrested on a disorderly conduct complaint of D. A. Hall, terminal guard. Taken to the First oPlice Precinct stationhouse in the patrol wagon, he was freed on the posting of $5 collateral.

Judge John P. McMahon yesterday continued hearing on the charge till next Wednesday at the request of Tress' counsel, J. Kenneth Yeatman.

One engineer was hurt seriously, a fireman suffered minor injuries, and one of the two switching engines involved was badly damaged in the sideswiping collision. Escaping steam from the wrecked engine led to a report there had been an explosion.

American Smelting Nets $8.74 a Share

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—American Smelting & Refining Co. in a consolidated report today showed for the first six months net income of $20,896,033, equal to $8.74 a common share, compared with $1,867,777 or five cents a share for the first half of 1946.

The report said the company's operations, drastically reduced by strikes a year ago, were at a relatively high level this year despite labor shortages at many mines and some smelters.

Of the $8.74 earnings through June 30, about $2 was due to nonrecurring profits, the company said.

Rail's July Net Drops

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 27 (AP).—Net income of the Virginian railway during July dropped to $199,536 from the July, 1946, total of $459,550. However, the net income of the road for the first seven months of this year was $4,162,120, compared with $1,751,445 in that period last year.

Hobby Turned To Profession Brings Honors

William C. McHenry, 1631 Monroe st. nw., who turned his hobby into a profession, this week earned two "awards of merit" for his photographic work.

McHenry

Both photographs were taken by McHenry in his work as staff photographer for Capital Transit Co. He received the awards at the annual convention of the Photographers' Association of America, being held this week at the Hotel Stevens in Chicago.

A native Washingtonian, McHenry is a graduate of McKinley High School and attended Georgetown University. He first became interested in photography when his his school physics teacher brought a camera to class for a demonstration.

He has been working for Capital Transit for more than a year. Both prize-winning photographs appeared in Transit Lines, the monthly employes' magazine of the company.

McHenry, 38, is married and has two daughters. He has a complete darkroom and studio set up in his basement.

U. S. Falls Behind In Shipbuilding, Federation Says

By the United Press

The National Federation of American Shipping said last night that foreign competitors are greatly outdistancing the United States in postwar ship construction.

Only seven per cent of the projected American merchant marine will comprise postwar ships as contrasted with 30 per cent for major European allies, 17 per cent for European neutrals and 12 per cent for Britain, an NFAS report said.

Prepared by James A. McCullough, NFAS research director, the report said the overall size of foreign merchant fleets continues to increase primarily through purchases of war-built American vessels.

"Because of this growth, we are opposed to the sale of any more war-built dry cargo vessels to foreign operators," the federation said.

While the United States operated a fleet totalling 28 million deadweight tons out of a world total of 75,200,000 at the beginning of this year, the NFAS estimated that in the future our total would drop to 11,400,000 while that of foreigners would increase.

Eastern Price Probe to Open In Providence

The Eastern phase of a three-pronged congressional investigation of rising consumer prices will open in Providence, R. I., September 15, Senator Ralph E. Flanders (R., Vt.) announced yesterday.

Flanders, chairman of the Eastern subcommittee of the Joint Committee on the economic report, said hearings will be held the same week in the neighborhood of Boston and the following week in New York City.

Bypassing Washington, the price hearings will continue in Philadelphia on September 30; Richmond, October 7 and Atlanta, October 14. Committee spokesmen said members felt they had adequate first-hand data on consumer prices in Washington.

Plan Small Groups

At each of the key points the subcommittee will divide into smaller groups to take testimony in neighboring communities.

A Mid-Continent subcommittee, headed by Representative George H. Bender (R., Ohio) recently announced opening of Mid-Western hearings in Cleveland September 23. A far-western subcommittee, led by Senator Arthur V. Watkins (R., Utah), has not yet announced its itinerary.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), a minority member of the joint committee making the cost surveys, meanwhile told newsmen production is threatened by rising prices.

Price Fixing Hit

"The consuming power in America is beyond the imagination of those business executives who are retarding production by holding up prices," the Wyoming Democrat told reporters.

Instead of boosting prices, O'Mahoney said business leaders should be expanding production and tapping an "American market that has not yet been scratched."

"Steel executives who are unwilling to expand steel capacity to meet perfectly obvious demands seem to entertain the same doubts about the capability of the capitalistic system that are expressed by Mr. Stalin," he said.

"Leaders in the steel industry could do more for their own business and for the country by reducing prices and increasing production than can be done in any other way."

Va. Woods Searched For Missing Girl, 15

Dewitt, Va., Aug. 27 (AP).—Scores of persons searched a wooded section of Dinwiddie County near here today for 15-year-old Mildred Williams, woh disappeared from her home this morning.

Police were notified by the girl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Williams of Dewitt who said she apparently wandered from her home into a wooded section nearby about 8:30 a. m.

Langer, Other Senators Pay Surprise Visits to Prisons

By The Associated Press

Senator Langer (R., Ind.) disclosed yesterday that he and other Senate Judiciary committeemen are making "unannounced investigation" of conditions at the 27 Federal prison institutions.

"We drop in by surprise," the Senator told a reporter. "Sometimes we arrive just at a mealtime to see what the boys are being fed. We may arrive at 2 a. m. in order to turn up the covers and see if there are bedbugs or lice."

Langer said that Attorney General Tom Clark and James Bennett, director of Federal prisons, were cooperating with the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee he heads by ordering wardens and superintendents to admit the Senate investigators at any time of day or night.

"We are not announcing the time of our inspections because we want to see actual prison conditions," Langer said.

"This is the first time that the Senate Judiciary Committee has made a check on all the prisons."

Bennett said the Attorney General and the Bureau of Prisons "welcome the inspection by any congressional committees. We have some serious problems on which Congress can help. I am completing a survey and study now for Senator Langer."

As subcommittee chairman, Langer said he has asked Senators Donnell (R., Mo.) and McGrath (D., R. I.) to inspect Federal prisons in the South.

Langer and Senator Chavez (D., N. M.) will cover the other prisons.

Disparity in sentences for the same crime is one subject being investigated, Langer said.

Posse Tracks Tenant Farmer Down in Maryland Kidnaping

Easton, Md., Aug. 27 (AP).—Possemen today tracked down a 39-year-old Negro charged with kidnaping a 15-year-old white girl three weeks ago.

States' Attorney Harry E. Clark of Talbot County announced the capture and said three State troopers caught the fugitive, Cornelius Ellsworth Whiting, when he attempted to flee from the rear door of a house near Skipton, 10 miles north of here.

The house was identified as the home of Whiting's father-in-law. When the kidnaping warrant was sworn out August 7, Deputy Sheriff Tom Stewart of Talbot County reported Mrs. Whiting had left her husband and returned to live with her parents because of his attentions to the girl. He said the couple apparently planned to elope.

Whiting and the girl's father are tenant workers on a farm at Wye Mills, Md., near Skipton.

State's Attorney Clark gave this account of the girl's rescue Sunday evening near Starkey's Corner, in lower Queen Anne's County:

"She saw her father walking down a road near the woods where Whiting had her hidden. She called to her father and he saw Whiting dragging her back into the woods.

"The father summoned Constable Watson Wessell, who rode into the woods on horseback and rescued the girl."

Clark said she was undernourished and needed medical care. Monday she was transferred to Memorial Hospital here. She has not yet been released but her condition was described as "not serious."

Cooperation Is Asked On Jobs to Handicapped

By The Associated Press

President Truman yesterday asked Federal, State and local officials to cooperate in a "sustained program" aimed at employment of physically handicapped persons.

He signed a proclamation designating October 5-11 of this year as "National Employ and Physically Handicapped Week." It declared that the Nation has an "unused reservoir of skills and strength" in thousands of physically handicapped persons who are able to work but have no jobs.

Realty Boards Are Indicted charges, have been engaged "for many years" in a combination and conspiracy to restrain the trade and commerce of the District.

The indictment alleges that the price-fixing has increased amounts paids for commissions to brokers for the sale of houses in a large part of the District from 25 to 50 per cent.

The national association is a national trade group. It is incorporated in Chicago and has an office here. It has a membership of about 28,000 real estate brokers and about 800 local real estate brokers associations throughout the United States.

The Washington board, incorporated in the District, has a membership of about 250 real estate brokers and others affiliated with the real estate business.

The indictment declares that members of the Washington board control at least 50 per cent of all real estate commerce in the District.

Attorney General Tom Clark who promised recently that the Justice Department would probe high prices of food, clothing and housing, had this comment on the development:

"Our inquiry into the housing field indicates that artificial restraints on competition, such as those involved in this matter, bear a definite relation to present high housing costs."

Assistant Attorney General John F. Sonnett, who heads the Justice Department's Antitrust Division, said:

"It is charged in these cases that in addition to the absence of competition among real estate brokers with respect to commission rates there have been uniform agreements and concerted action whereby realty commission rates have been substantially increased in recent years.

"Such practices in this field are especially burdensome, particularly in view of the heavy 'turn-over' in dwellings."

While the national association and the Washington board withheld formal comment on the indictment, two of the Washington board directors who were named in the civil suit made personal statements.

Lewis T. Breuninger said:

"The suit was a surprise to me. It would seem that there must be some motive back of the proceedings other than that which already has been disclosed.

"Members of the Washington board have done nothing in violation of the law. A standard rate of commission as a guide—which rate has been customary for many years and which can be altered by a board member or a circumstances warrant—can't, in my opinion, be a restraint of trade."

F. Moran McConihe, who is president of Randall H. Hagner & Co., Inc., commented:

"Practices and commission rates of the Washington board have been well established and publicized for years. There's nothing secret about the rates. We believe they are fair."

Rates Considered Fair

Colonel Clyde Eastman, president of the Alexandria-Arlington-Fairfax Real Estate Board, said the standard commission rates have been considered fair by the Virginia Real Estate Commission.

"Recommend commission rates," said Eastman, "are not always followed. The suggested commission on farm properties is 10 per cent, but many of them are sold for 5 per cent commissions. Realtors pledge themselves to observe a code of ethics, not to adhere to set commission rates."

The code of ethics comes in for considerable comment in the indictment returned yesterday.

The indictment said that the National Association's Committee on Rates, Rules and Customs made studies of brokerage commission rates throughout the country after it initiated a plan to "raise" and "achieve uniformity" in the nationwide rates. The Washington board, it is charged, raised its rates on the recommendation of the national association.

The indictment adds that members of the Washington board agree to abide by the code of ethics of the national association. Article 9 of this code, according to the indictment, requires each member of each local real estate board, including the Washington board, to observe the schedule of commissions established by the local board.

Attention is called to Section 3 of the code of ethics of the Washington board which reads:

"Brokers should maintain the standard rates of commission adopted by the board and no business should be solicited at lower rates."

It is charged also in the indictment that the Washington board on February 16, 1943, increased its commission rates on sales and exchanges of real estate, leases and management of real estate.

The indictment says that prior to February 16, 1943, on sales of real estate, brokers received a commission of 5 per cent on the first $5000 of the sales price and an additional 3 per cent on the excess above $5000. The new rate is 5 per cent on the first $50,000 and 3 per cent on the excess.

In summarizing the effects of the alleged price-fixing, the indictment cites the increased amounts paid to brokers and declares that competition between local brokers "has been eliminated" and the "activities and business policies" of the brokers "actively and effectively restricted and dominated."

If found guilty of the antitrust law violations, each organization faces a maximum fine of $5000.

The civil suit in addition to asking a restraining order against both organizations and the 16 individuals named seeks to have the provisions of the constitution and by-laws of both groups which set "any schedule of commissions" or fix any rate of commission declared illegal.

The real estate case was prepared by Victor H. Kramer and Herbert N. Maletz, special assistants to the Attorney General, and by Joseph N. Stanley, special attorney of the Justice Department, under supervision of Assistant Attorney General Sonnett and Edward P. Hodges, chief of the Complaints Section of the Antitrust Division.

Sonnett would not say in which direction the probe would now turn, but admitted that Kramer and Maletz would be before the July grand jury again today.

May Probe Other Angles

This left open the possibility that the jury will now turn its attention to other phases of housing. Attorney General Clark's letter authorizing the grand jury allowed for such a broadening of the probe.

One report was that the producers of building materials are next to be called for questioning. As for the builders, their spokesmen say they have not yet received summons to apear before the jury. The jury will convene at 10:30 a. m. today.

The bombshell dropped by the July grand jury took the spotlight away from the April grand jury which since Monday has been hearing testimony in the Government's investigation of complaints of price fixing by oil and gasoline companies in the District and the nearby Maryland counties of Prince Georges and Montgomery.

Officials of 11 companies have been called before the jury so far. Yesterday's witnesses included Wallace S. Linfoot, president of the Retail Gasoline Dealers, Inc., a District organization representing about 70 of the approximately 600 gasoline service stations in the District; G. M. Sullivan of Richmond, division manager of Continental Oil Co., and Byron Mackenzie, area manager of the Sinclair Refining Co.

Linfoot told reporters he was questioned about the possibility of collusion in setting gasoline prices, but that he assured the Justice Department attorneys such was not the case here.

He said he was also asked about filling station leases. Linfoot, who leases a station from Esso, said he outlined the workings of his own lease. He said he told the jury that his lease with Esso, which is on an annual basis, permits him to change products and to set his own prices.

The gasoline price probe is in the hands of W. B. Watson Snyder, special assistant to the Attorney General, and Willard R. Memler, Justice Department attorney.

Snyder said the jury will probably sit from 10:30 a. m. to 4 p. m. today after which it may recess until September 8.

accept a $12,000-a-year job with the mineral division of the Atomic Energy Commission when Krug "persuaded" the President to make the recess appointment.

"All through this prolonged Boyd mess and the imposing of the Boyd incompetency upon the coal industry, we have been amazed at the apparent influence that Playboy Krug has with President Truman . . .

"If the President believes that Playboy Krug, with a squirt mentality and baloonized physique, can deliver the Western vote by his clusy and crude administration of reclamation funds, then he certainly is the only one who believes as much, and we know something about the political setup of the West."

An earlier editorial charged Krug with a "vengeance campaign" against Lewis.

Judge Raedy To Face Court

cluding four policemen, as prosecution witnesses. They were:

Pvt. R. G. Ducote of the Traffic Division; Pvt. William F. Sturgeon of Precinct 1; Pvt. Leon Jackson and Precinct Detective Emmett R. Waters of the Accident Investigation Unit; Mrs. Elizabeth Wimbish of 910 1st st. nw., owner of the damaged vehicle; Hilton Rheubottom of 1504 Stevens rd. se., alleged eyewitness to the accident; and Neil O'Brien, service manager of Haley's, Inc., 2020 M st. nw., who will testify on the damages.

Estimates of the damages began at $10 and rose to $29, but last night dropped to $27.50 when O'Brien told King that he had mistakenly included "some nicks" on the unhit side of the car in his estimate of $29.

King said that a 3-foot long inch-wide strip of chromium found at the scene of the accident at 1st and K sts. nw., which was matched to a broken piece on the Ready Buick convertible the night of the accident, would be used to prove that her car did the damage.

Rheubottom, 38-year-old service station operator at the accident scene, will be called to identify the judge as the driver of the hit-run vehicle. According to King, Rheubottom was preparing to drive the damaged car into his driveway preliminiary to closing the station when he saw the collision.

King and West decided to file the charges after a late afternoon conference Tuesday. King said that he felt a "prima facie" case was established and "there was no use in waiting till Christmas for witnesses to come back."

The assistant corporation counsel said that he had received many telephone calls on the case advising him variously to press or drop the Raedy investigation, but that these suggestions and three anonymous letters on the matter had not conditioned his actions.

"I handled this case just like any other I am assigned to," King declared, emphatically.

He said that he was not pressing a charge of failing to obey a traffic signal at the corner because the "leaving after colliding is the important thing and if somebody wants to get away after hitting another car he'll go by a red light."

Yesterday Judge Raedy, who was scheduled to hear cases, did not arrive at her chambers.

The question of who will hear the case, which will not be held before a jury because of the limited sentence which may be imposed, is still undecided. Judge Gallagher is scheduled to leave the Traffic Court assignmept on August 31.

Judge Walter J. Casey is scheduled to succeed her, although the final decision will be up to Chief Judge George P. Barse. In either case, however, the jurists may desire to disqualify themselves in the matter because of their previous relations with Judge Raedy.

Meanwhile, police found the Hayes home at 909 1st st. nw., scene of the party, a deserted house. A cleaning girl's note left for Mrs. Hayes was still pinned to the locked front door and dark shades covered the closed windows on both floors of the row house. The Hub Laundry noted that its representative had been there and a telegram addressed to J. Carroll Hayes, attorney, was under the door.

Ruark Explains Views on Lee To Army Inspector General

Leghorn, Italy, Aug. 27 (U.P.)—Scripps-Howard columnist Robert C. Ruark testified for two-and-a-half hours today in the investigation he set off—the Army's probe of the administration of Lieut. Gen. John C. H. Lee, Mediterranean Theater commander.

After a private question-and-answer session with Maj. Gen. Ira T. Wyche, Army inspector general, the columnist said:

"I testified freely under oath and answered all questions to the best of my ability. As far as I am concerned, this ends the whole matter."

Ruark, who charged Lee with maladministration in a five-article series, described his conference with Wyche as cordial and "done in a business-like manner."

Lee was expected to return tomorrow from the north, where he was said to have been inspecting Italian troops.

Wyche, emphasizing that his report would be confidential to Secretary of War Kenneth Royall, said he had no idea when he would close the investigation.

Veto 'Tampering' Will Wreck U. N., Soviet Delegate Warns

Herschel V. Johnson, while flatly opposing any alteration of the veto, accused Russia of "dashing hopes" that the big powers would refrain from using the veto to impede the work of the Council. Johnson introduced a series of 15 American proposals for clarifying Security Council procedures and eliminating various procedural operations from the range of the veto power.

3. Gromyko scoffed at the Syrian suggestion, branded the American proposals as an apparent attempt to tamper with the veto and advised the Security Council to "do nothing" about the veto question.

4. Poland applauded the United States for opposing any change in the veto and, as Delegate Juliusz Katz-Suchy put it, for forgoing "the cheers of the ladies knitting circles and the boys clubs, which are not taken seriously."

Russia has used the veto 18 of the 20 times it has been invoked in the Security Council.

Sally Haines Called Liar by Irate Judge

New York, Aug. 27 (INS).—Sally Haines was termed a liar and an accomplice in the $780,000 Mergenthaler Linotype Co. swindle today by Kings County Judge Goldstein.

The six-time-married movie actress was denied recovery of $5400 found in a safe deposit box she kept jointly with her boy friend, Jimmy Collins, now serving 20 to 40 years in the swindle.

Judge Goldstein termed her testimony incomplete, evasive, contradictory, suspicious and unworthy of belief.

British Restrict Traveling And Reduce Food Rations

consideration taken of workers was the provision for reducing on September 14 supplies to higher-priced restaurants.

The provision will not affect restaurants and canteens serving meals at prices below 45 cents.

The abolition of the basic gasoline ration was unexpected.

Britons previously had been allowed enough gasoline for 300 miles of pleasure driving a month.

After October 1 use of gasoline will be permitted only for essential business.

The announcement from Downing Street Emphasized that the new restrictions are merely interim measures aimed at saving hard currency.

A detailed announcement concerning Britain's export policy was promised for the second week of September.

The cut in the already meager meat ration goes into effect September 7.

Britons also were asked to forego a promised increase in the present tea ration of two ounces weekly.

Beginning September 15 hotel guests must surrender ration cards after a stay of two nights instead of four.

The announcement said that ration points are to be altered, whenever necessary and according to circumstances, from September 14.

Public luncheons and dinners will be curtailed and some times restricted to 100 guests.

Importation of certain luxury foods, a list of which will be announced later, will be prohibited.

The foreign travel allowance of $300 for each person is reduced immediately to $130 until September 30. After that time all grants of currency for pleasure travel abroad will be suspended.

Currency allowances for business travel will be placed under strict control and will be reduced from $40 to $32 daily for certain countries.

British-Soviet Trade Accord Stalled by Loan

London, Aug. 27 (U.P.).—Britain's attempts to reach a trade agreement with Russia still are stalemated by Russia's refusal to pay more than half of the 2,430,000-pound installment due August 1 on the 1941 and 1944 loans, a Board of Trade spokesman said today.

The Anglo-Soviet trade talks last month in Moscow broke down over this same question, which Britain considers of extreme importance. Under the proposed agreement Britain would import products worth more than she exported, with hopes that the difference could largely be offset by the Russian repayments.

U. S. Now to Begin More Direct Aid to Europe, Says-Lovett

nounced 34 million dollars had been committed to buy urgently needed relief supplies for Italy out of the 350 million dollars foreign relief fund voted by Congress last month. Previously 43 million had been committed to buy relief goods for Austria.

3. Secretary Snyder indicated to a Treasury press conference that the remaining 400 million dollars of the British loan were temporarily frozen pending a "screening" of dollar requests at the Bank of England. In practice this would mean that Britain, Canada, and India, which legitimately need dollars, could get some from the 400-million balance, whereas Argentina and other countries could not. He denied there had been any agreement, informal or otherwise, to violate the loan clause forbidding discriminatory trading, but added that discussions on the loan would be resumed when he visits London next month.

4. Anglo-American discussions to boost the output of Ruhr coal are making good progress, Acting Secretary Lovett said, and should end in agreement by early next week. The Anglo-French-American talks in London on the level of German industry are also going well, he said.

5. Secretary Krug's committee has virtually finished its survey of American natural resources that could be used to help European reconstruction. James Boyd, its head and new director of the Bureau of Mines, said the committee's report would be submitted next week to President Truman, who commissioned it.

At the State Department Lovett made it clear the United States could not meet all of Europe's probable requirements for help. He said the United States would have to set up a system of screening the European requests soon after the 16 nations at Paris had finished their work.

He first described this as a system of peacetime priorities much like the wartime system used to dispose of bottlenecks in production and supply. He quickly explained, however, that he was not talking about priorities as between European and domestic users of reconstruction goods.

Suppose, he explained, the Europeans come to us with a list of 10 items they urgently need. Suppose we find that we can supply 5 but not all 10. Then, said Lovett, it will be up to us to select those five which will best break the bottlenecks that are blocking European recovery.

He said he had paid absolutely no attention so far to the amounts of dollars involved, although reports from Paris have put the tentative European request between 28 and 30 billion dollars over a four-year period. The problem, he said, is not one of dollar shortages but of a production shortage all over the world.

The United States will first have to take its own needs into account, he said, and then determine what it can produce and supply to help Europe.

He emphasized that the United States expected the Europeans at Paris to produce a unified program that would stress self-help and mutual aid.

Food Exports Rise 30 Million In Six Months

By the United Press

The Commerce Department reported last night that U. S. food exports were 30 million dollars higher in the first six months of 1947 than in the same period last year, but some Government experts said the future may not be so rosy for certain specialized commodities.

Exports totaled $1,241,000,000 on July 1, with grain, fruit, nuts and fodders and feeds leading the way. Imports increased 31.2 per cent or from 633 million dollars to 831 million dollars.

Agriculture Department officials said, however, that Britain's decision to cut its American food purchases, as well as recent changes in the British loan agreement, may put a permanent crimp in the export of such commodities as tobacco, dried fruits and dried and frozen eggs. Tobacco exports are expected to be the hardest hit.

Officials said any American fruit or egg exports which may be cut by the British in their current economic belt-tightening may be absorbed by the United States or other countries. But they said tobacco is a "different matter."

They pointed out the British acquired a taste for cigarettes during the war. If they don't continue to get them, the officials said, they'll turn to something else and lose that taste for good."

Legion Committees Blast Communists

Held Greatest Menace To America in Report Issued on Parley Eve

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—The American Legion's foreign relations committee blasted communist as "the greatest menace in the field of international relations facing America" in a report issued late today on the eve of the Legion's twenty-ninth national convention.

The report, one of a series prepared by committees for guidance of the convention, mentioned no foreign state by name but it declared "the aggressive spread of Communism" was "fostered and promoted by a totalitarian state."

To combat Communism, the committee urged strong backing of the Marshall Plan for aid to Europe, "control of the acute situation in the Balkans, coupled with a strengthening of the United Nations."

Take Over Fun Spots

Meanwhile, frolicking Legionnaires took over most of the city's hotels and fun spots, their ranks swelled by almost every arriving train, bus and plane.

Lieut. Gen. J. Lawton Collins, the Army's acting deputy chief of staff, told the Legion national defense commission in a preconvention session that the Army had shrunk to the point where only 2 1/3 divisions actually were ready now for combat.

The United States needs 1,750,000 ground and air force personnel trained to fight on mobilization day in event of a future war, Collins said, adding he believed this number could be obtained only through a universal military training law.

There now are 600,000 ground troops and 400,000 airmen, he said, with a planned National Guard strength of 700,000. Voluntary recruiting will not furnish the necessary strength, the general asserted.

The Legion will focus its energies tomorrow on national defense and international relations problems not solved in the two years since the end of World War II.

Forrestal to Talk

James V. Forrestal, first United States Secretary of National Defense under the new unification law, will be a headliner at the convention's opening session tomorrow at Madison Square Garden.

Legion National Comdr. Paul H. Griffith will call the convention to order at 11:30 a. m. (E.S.T.). Mayor William O'Dwyer and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey will be on hand to greet the fighting men from two world wars.

A distinguished foreign guest also will address the opening session—Field Marshall Viscount Harold Alexander, Governor General of Canada and an outstanding British war hero.

The session will end in the late afternoon, in time for the fun-and-frolic parade of the 40 and 8, Legion honor society. This is scheduled for 5 p. m. (E.S.T.) and will proceed 22 blocks down 8th ave., on Manhattan's West Side.

Britain Plans New Effort For Petkov

London, Aug. 27 (AP).—Britain will make an eighth attempt to halt the execution of Nikola Petkov, top Bulgarian anti-Communist leader, through an appeal to Vassil Kolarov, acting president of the Bulgarian National Assembly, the foreign office said today.

Neither the United States nor Britain has abandoned hope of saving Petkov, sentenced to death on charges of plotting to overthrow the government. A British-American appeal directly to Moscow was rejected on the ground it was "interference" in internal affairs of Bulgaria.

In addition, the British have sent two notes to the three-power Allied Control Council in Sofia, and four approaches have been made to various members of the Bulgarian government in Petkov's behalf.

British Withdrawal From Greece Discussed

Undersecretary of State Robert Lovett said yesterday the United States and Britain are discussing a schedule for withdrawal of British soldiers from Greece.

He made that statement at a news conference in response to questions. Lovett also told reporters:

1. The United States wants to see a new cabinet emerge from the Greek crisis which will be acceptable to both the Greek leaders and the Greek people.

2. As part of the 400-million-dollar program to stem the spread of Communism, the United States is now getting together supplies to ship to Turkey. In this program, 25 per cent of the outlay was earmarked for Turkey, the balance for Greece.

3. This country is keenly concerned about the plight of a shipload of Jews who have been blocked by the British from getting into Palestine.

4. This country has drafted but has not yet made public two more notes to Russia. One of them is an answer to Russia's protest against the current American-British-French conference in London on raising the level of Germany's industrial production. The other deals with the stalemate between the Soviet Union and this country in efforts to set up a unified provisional government for Korea.

5. The State Department still is attempting to work out a way of saving the life of Nikola Petkov, Bulgarian anti-Communist leader sentenced to die on charges of plotting against his government.

Empire Parley Studies U. S. Role

Canberra, Australia, Aug. 27 (AP). Support for the proposal that the United States exercise dominating military influence in the northwestern Pacific to guard against a resurgence of Japanese aggressive power was reported to have been voiced at the British Empire conference on the Japanese peace today.

There was no indication of the support for the Australian proposal that main reliance be upon the United States to hold Japanese militarism in check in the future.

An official statement said the conference took up consideration today of territorial restrictions on Japan and that the discussions were "simplified by the existence of statements made at Cairo, Yalta and Potsdam."

Financial Institutions Only Can Cash GI Bonds

By The Associated Press

With approach of the time when GI terminal leave bonds may be cashed after next Tuesday, the Treasury reiterated today that only banks and other approved financial institutions can cash the bonds, and only for the persons named in the bonds.

Officials warned merchants not to cash the bonds or take them in as payment for goods or services, since they are not authorized to receive the bonds and stand to lose their money if they accept them. Officials said one purpose of the cash-in restrictions is to prevent "sharks" from profiting on bonds bought at a discount.

Iranian Princess Begins Study Of District Welfare Agencies

A tiny lady with a big ambition started a two-week study of Washington's public welfare system and its private welfare agencies yesterday.

She is petite Princess Ashraf Pahlavi, twin sister of Shah Mohamed Reza Pahlavi, ruler of Iran. As director of Iran's new Imperial Social Service Organization, she hopes to develop much needed orphanages, hospitals and clinics in her native land.

It will not be the first venture into the field of social work for the 28-year-old princess. She explained yesterday:

"During the war, I went down among the people. I saw how they lived and how much they needed help."

With her own funds, she established the Ashraf Institution, where destitute mothers were paid wages to weave and then often allowed to clothe themselves free in the cloth they had woven.

At the same time, she established a nursery school, with trained instructors, for some 130 children of the mothers who had been given employment. She also established a dispensary for them, but its patients soon included everyone in the vicinity.

New new Foundation was established with funds donated by her father, when he abdicated in 1941. It will be developed with funds from the aristocracy and wealthy merchants, who, the Princess explained, are anxious to contribute.

Princess Ashraf spent yesterday with American Red Cross officials here. She hopes to confer with Public Welfare officials and to visit our hospitals and private social agencies during the next two weeks.

The mother of two sons, 7 and 2 years of age, she is married to the head of Iran's Civil Aviation Board. There's not a doubt in her mind that women can manage both marriage and a career. She has.

U. S. String-Pulling Termed Inevitable in Greek Crisis

By M. W. Fodor
Post Reporter

Athens, Greece (By Airmail)—The United States intervention in the Greek political crisis was inevitable.

When Ambassador Lincoln MacVeagh called the leaders of the two important political parties to his home and asked a settlement of the cabinet controversy, it marked the first step in America's insistence on a government that offers some hope of success to our efforts in Greece.

MacVeagh, in a short speech, asked Constantine Tsaldaris, leader of the Populist Party, and Themistocles Sophoulis, leader of the Liberal Party, to make up their differences and unite in a government of national unity.

During the negotiations, Tsaldaris showed willingness to compromise. He offered to accept a neutral premier under whom both leaders would serve.

But Sophoulis, 87-year-old patriarch, insisted that after the failure of the right-wing Maximos-Tsaldaris government he should be named premier and that he should name the men to hold the war, public safety and justice portfolios.

Immediately after the conference, Tsaldaris told reporters he was forming the new government.

It is doubtful that Tsaldaries can name a cabinet, without the Liberal Party's support, that can win a vote of confidence. If he did succeed, the life of the cabinet would be short.

It is doubtful that Tsaldaris like Tsaldaris to issue statements telling what they are going to do. Everybody in Athens is issuing statements telling what various leaders are going to do.

But it is an obvious fact that the United States is not going to pour 300 million dollars into this country unless there is a government that gives us a chance to restore peace and economic health.

When the government is finally formed, it will be one that will work with the United States.

Army Forbids Tokyo Pets

Tokyo, Aug. 27 (U.P.).—The U. S. headquarters, was asked by the custodian of his building to evict two Hartz Mountain warblers. Wesson refused, in writing.

"My wife says she's going to take them to headquarters and give them personally to the officer who wrote the order," he said.

Army today ordered its military and civilian personnel billeted in city apartments to get rid of their pets within 48 hours. Angry occupation wives labeled the order "The Canary Murder Case."

The order included cats, dogs, chickens, monkeys and rabbits. It left the fate of canaries uncertain. Goldfish were okayed as nonnuisances.

The order threatened to break up at least one home and precipitated a crisis paralelling the housing shortage here after the war.

"My husband is only a first lieutenant," said one matron, who asked that her name be withheld. "I guess they can order him to do whatthey want. But if my dog goes, so do I."

When the question of canaries arose, a headquarters officer said caged birds were "not necessarily" included in the order. But this merely added to the confusion.

Atom Bomb Threat Ridiculed by Tito

London, Aug. 27 (U.P.).—Radio Moscow today reported a speech by Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia at Zagreb in which he said that atom bombs and war did not scare Yugoslavia and that the army was prepared to defend the country any time the necessity arose.

"International reaction fears our moral strength, our social system and the unity of our people," he was quoted as saying.

"Because of this, international reaction talks about the atom bomb and war, and stages provocations against us. But we have strong nerves and are cool-headed.

"We are a small state but our contribution to the last war and our sacrifices entitle us to speak as equals with the great powers. Both with Britain and America and with other countries we speak as equals. We declare we shall not let ourselves be treated as a kind of colonial people . . .

"One cannot conquer a country by talk about atom bombs. One needs men to wage war, and the people, including the British and American people, do not want war. Consequently these reactionary circles eveidently only wish to provoke and in some way to intimidate us. But we shall not let ourselves be intimidated.

"We are peacefully building a better future for our country. We have allies—the fraternal Soviet Union and other Slav countries. We have our army for the defense of our country, and if at any time the necessity arises—which I do not believe is likely—our people, who paid such a price in blood for its freedom and independence, will be able to defend its gains."

French Miffed, But Likely to Agree on Ruhr

London, Aug. 27 (U.P.).—American, British and French delegates awaited word from their governments today before calling a final plenary session on raising the German industrial level in the Anglo-American zones.

A proposed communique summarizing the work of their six-day conference was forwarded to the British and French foreign offices and the State Department.

The first reaction came from Paris, where reliable sources said the foreign office felt its delegates "met with a complete rebuff."

It was understood, however, that France agreed not to oppose Anglo-American plans to raise production in their zones of Germany as long as Ruhr coal and other raw materials needed by French industry were not diverted to German factories.

not within the realm of the ultimately practicable.

"But knowledge precedes push-buttons, and theory precedes its application . . ."

In setting the more than two-billion-dollar goal for 1957—1% of the entire national income—the report said it would mean more than doubling, within the next decade, the present $1,100,000,000 expended by the Federal Government, industry and universities for research and development.

Steelman said "a substantial part of the money for such a program will have to be supplied by taxes and should be." He added that the Federal Government would have to finance at least half of the research budget—as it does now.

"There is little likelihood of any considerable expansion of university expenditures out of their present income sources," he said.

President Truman, in a statement accompanying the report, said:

"We must constantly enlarge the boundaries of scientific knowledge in order to continue to provide the benefits of full production and full employment, and in order to protect our democracy from the dangers it faces in an uneasy world."

The report placed heavy emphasis on the need for basic research, and Mr. Truman commented:

"The fact that only a thin trickle of scientific knowledge is today reaching us from other countries constitutes an emergency and a challenge.

"To meet this challenge, we must promote the rapid growth of basic research, the cross fertilization of ideas among our scientists, and the maturing of a new generation of scientists who will think boldly and daringly."

Declaring that at present the United States has "no unified or comprehensive policy on scientific research or the support of science," and that extension of scientific knowledge "may reasonably be said to be a major factor in national survival," the report, in addition to expenditures, also recommended:

1. That the next session of Congress establish a national science foundation "within the Executive Office of the President."

2. That the foundation be authorized to spend increasing amounts in support of basic research, rising to an annual rate of "at least $250 million by 1957."

3. That heavier emphasis be placed upon basic research and medical research in our National research and development budget—but that we maintain military research expenditures "at high levels for at least the next five years."

4. That a Federal program of assistance to undergraduate and graduate students in science be developed as a part of an overall National scholarship and fellowship program—in order to cope with a shortage of scientific manpower.

5. That Federal assistance be given to universities and colleges in the matter of laboratory facilities and scientific equipment.

6. That "every effort be made to assist in the reconstruction of European laboratories as a part of our program of aid to peace-loving countries."

7. That a Federal committee be established to assist in the coordination and development of the Government's own research and development programs — as distinguished from those carried on in industry and in universities.

President Truman, in his statement, said he would shortly name such a committee.

The report said "most major nations of the world recognize the essential importance of science to them and are expanding their research and development."

"The Soviet Union's 1947 budget, for example," the report said, "is reported to provide $1,200,000,000 as compared with outlays of 900 million dollars in 1946. In addition, the Russians have embarked upon a five-year program of stepped-up scientific training, under which they are reported to be producing 140,000 engineers and scientists each year."

Saying that in the past, the United States has obtained much basic scientific knowledge from countries abroad, the report said it can not count on doing so in the future.

It declared:

"Europe's laboratories are still blacked out and are likely to remain so as long as the unsettled state of the world continues."

Fastest Flier Says It's All In Day's Work

The man who makes a plane travel almost as fast as sound may walk into the operations office at Patuxent, Md., today and be assigned to a helicopter.

"It's all in a day's work," grinned 31-year-old Marine Maj. Marian E. Carl, who flew a Navy jet 650.6 miles an hour three days ago to set a new world's air speed record.

Major Carl paused in Washington long enough yesterday to receive the Navy's "well-done," a second Distinguished Flying Cross and to tell an NBC National hookup what the speed run was like.

With him to receive the Navy decoration was Comdr. Turner F. Caldwell, 625 N. Oakland st., Arlington, Va., who used the same plane a few days before to set a record of 640.7 miles an hour. The record stood four days, until Carl flashed over the three kilometer (1.86 miles) course on the Muroc, Calif., Dry Lake at only 53 miles an hour slower than sound.

Carl, wartime Pacific ace, reports for duty this morning at the Navy's Air Test Center, and is just as likely to be assigned to a helicopter as anything else.

U. S. Approves Atom Control Agency Plans

Lake Success, Aug. 27 (AP).—The United States today approved a series of proposals for formation and operation of an international agency for control of atomic energy. This country was the first to take such action.

Frederick H. Osborn, United States representative on the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission, also expressed this country's regret that the Soviet Union took no part in drawing up the papers.

Osborn made a brief statement to the political committee of the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission.

"As a whole," he said, "these papers draw a broad picture of the functions, rights, and obligations of an international agency which would be charged with the operation and management and sole control of all dangerous atomic activities—between this concept and the concept of national agencies, among which an international agency with powers of inspection would act as a regulatory body, there is a wide gulf. In the mind of the American delegation this gulf marks the difference between effective security on the one hand and the extension of national rivalries on the atomic field on the other."

U. S. Advocates Pole-to-Pole Security Zone at Rio Parley

Quitandinha, Brazil, Aug. 27 (AP).—The Inter-American Conference gave full committee approval today to eight articles on aggression—termed the "heart" of the treaty on hemisphere defense—and the United States pressed for a security zone stretching from pole to pole.

The steering committee announced that the final conference plenary session will be held Tuesday and the treaty will be signed formally in the Brazilian Foreign Office in Rio de Janeiro on the following day.

The committee agreed to call the pact the "Treaty of Rio de Janeiro," and by a vote of 10 to 9 decided that Ecuador—scene of a bloodless revolt on Sunday—would not be a signatory.

A key official said the conference was making its "best efforts" to have President Truman on hand for the closing plenary session.

An American delegate said the United States would propose that the armed defense of the hemisphere be extended from the North to the South Pole.

He said the hemisphere defense line drawn by the Panama Declaration of 1939 extended northward only to the United States-Canadian border, but the United States proposal would stretch that line all the way to the North Pole, embracing Greenland in an easterly sweep and Alaska to the west.

Yesterday the full conference committee on aggression and enforcement measures approved a United States proposal to fight jointly against any armed aggression in a Western Hemisphere "security zone" extending from the Arctic to the Antarctic.

The committee agreed to include outlying Argentine islands and South Polar territory claimed jointly by Argentine and Chile in the vast pole-to-pole area.

Soviet, Colombia Votes to Tell Story Today on Egypt's Fate

Lake Success, Aug. 27 (AP).—Security Council delegates huddled in a series of private conferences tonight on the eve of decision in the long-debated Anglo-Egyptian case which has been marked by two unprecedented spectator outbursts in the Council chamber.

Russia and Colombia, holding what may prove to be the trump cards, still had not tipped their hands in the case and were regarded as the key figures in the vote, expected tomorrow.

Secretary-General Trygve Lie announced emphatically that the two Egyptian demonstrators tossed out of the chamber last Friday and again on Tuesday were barred from entering the United Nations grounds henceforth.

"If it happens again we will have to give them over to the police," Lie said tersely in commenting on the demonstration staged yesterday by Ahmed Kamel Kotb and Mustafa Momen, who describe themselves as Egyptian nationalists.

A preliminary unofficial lineup showed six nations tentatively lined up behind a Brazilian proposal calling on Egypt and Britain to resume direct negotiations for settlement of their dispute. Any resolution—subject of course to veto in the final analysis—needs seven affirmative votes in the 11-nation council.

Those supporting Brazil's measure are the United States, China, Australia, Belgium and France.

Russia, Poland and Syria were opposed. They supported Egyptian demands for removal of British troops immediately and unconditionally from the Nile Valley.

Dominicans Manned LCI

Baltimore, Aug. 27 (AP).—The Evening Sun said today Baltimore is "reported to have been one of the early assembly areas for an eventual move through Cuban waters against the Dominican republic."

The newspaper said its investigation of State Department detention of a converted infantry landing craft in Baltimore harbor disclosed the ship's "crew" was composed largely of Dominican exiles who "hated" Rafael L. Trujillo, for 17 years President of the republic.

Customs officials ordered the 153-foot landing craft detained yesterday. A State Department spokesman said in Washington the action was in line with its instructions to the FBI and other Government agencies to prevent the use of territory in this country as a possible base of operations to promote civil strife elsewhere.

The Evening Sun said its investigation disclosed that nearly 40 men were aboard the LCI at one time, although a normal crew is 12 or 14.

Most of the "crew" had left "by last night," the paper reported, and conversations aboard indicated "many of them were from fairly wealthy families" and "were not Communists."

IF STOMACH BALKS DUE TO GAS AND BLOAT
Help Get Food Digested to Relieve Yourself of This Nervous Distress
Do you feel all puffed-up and miserable after every meal, taste sour, bitter food? If so, here is how you may get blessed relief in helping your stomach do the job—it should be doing—in the digestion of its food.
Everytime food enters the stomach a vital gastric juice must flow normally to break-up certain food particles; else the food may ferment. Sour food, acid indigestion and gas frequently cause a morbid, touchy, fretful, peevish, nervous condition, loss of appetite, underweight, restless sleep, weakness.
To get real relief you must increase the flow of this vital gastric juice. Medical authorities, in independent laboratory tests on human stomachs, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in increasing this flow when it is too little or scanty due to a non-organic stomach disturbance. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.
Also, SSS Tonic helps build-up non-organic, weak, watery blood in nutritional anemia—so with a good flow of this gastric digestive juice, plus rich red-blood you should eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better.
Avoid punishing yourself with overdoses of soda and other alkalizers to counteract gas and bloating when what you so dearly need is SSS Tonic to help you digest food for body strength and repair. Don't wait! Join the host of happy people SSS Tonic has helped. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle of SSS Tonic from your drug store today. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Judge Raedy's Car

Now that Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark King has filed formal charges against Municipal Judge Ellen K. Raedy for "leaving after colliding," the matter should be left to the courts on the basis of the evidence. We assume that Mr. King and his superior, Mr. West, would not have approved the charges had they not felt they could prove them. At the same time Judge Raedy is entitled, the same as any other American, to a presumption of innocence unless and until she is proved guilty. There is indication that this qualification has been overlooked in some quarters.

In itself the accident was trifling. An automobile identified as belonging to Judge Raedy struck a parked car the night of August 15 and left the scene without stopping. The damage to the other vehicle was estimated at between $10 and $29. While unquestionably the failure to stop constituted a violation of the law, it hardly warranted the opprobrium of "hit and run"—a term usually reserved for accidents in which someone is injured and left unattended.

The serious aspect of the affair comes from the confusion of statements that followed the collision. Judge Raedy maintains that she spent the evening at home and that she had lent her car to a friend who has not yet been located. An acquaintance has corroborated her version. Meanwhile, however, a gas station attendant who took down the car's license number has identified Judge Raedy as the driver, and a parking-lot employe has asserted that Judge Raedy was a passenger when the car was returned to the lot. Judge Raedy has stuck to her position and has sought to emphasize it by what we consider an altogether unfortunate observation that she could have had the case "fixed" if she had wished.

Undoubtedly the affair has been extravagantly publicized. At the same time it is apparent that in the delay and in her failure to attend hearings on the case Judge Raedy has received a great deal more consideration than would have been given the ordinary citizen. It is because of Judge Raedy's office as an administrator of justice that more than a little importance attaches to the court decision. If she should be proved guilty in the face of her statements to the contrary, it would be inconceivable that she should remain on the bench. Public confidence in her judicial competence would vanish. If, on the other hand, the case does not stand up after a furor has been raised, authorities will have a special obligation to see that Judge Raedy is fully exonerated without stigma.

Progress On Indonesia

By vote of 10 members, the United Kingdom abstaining for reasons which at the moment seem obscure, the Security Council has now ordered the Netherlands and the Republic of Indonesia to obey the cease-fire edict issued by the Council one month ago. The Council has also instructed career consular officials in Batavia to report to it on the responsibility for the outright defiance of its authority by the disputants in Java and Sumatra. And, at the same time, the Council decided to refrain from asking the International Court to determine whether it has any actual legal claim to the authority it has asserted—and which, in any case, it manifestly lacks the power to enforce. Finally, the Council voted to proffer its good offices to bring about a settlement of the dispute through negotiation.

None of this leaves the Security Council looking very glamorous or powerful. In a dispute involving no major nation, the Council has not yet been able even to bring about an effective truce. It has been accused by both parties, indeed, of worsening rather than alleviating the situation. And in dealing with the problem, its very membership has been subjected to such internal strains and stresses as to threaten an even more serious falling apart. There has been none of the unanimity of peace-loving states upon which the preservation of world order was presumed to depend.

It is well to remember, however, that the weaknesses of the Council are the weaknesses of its member nations, our own among them. So long as there are separate sovereign states upon the earth, peace must necessarily be a matter of agreement among them. And there being no easy formula for agreement, patient and persevering negotiations must serve as the next best substitute. Let us hope that the Dutch and the Indonesian Republicans accept the good offices of the Security Council and use them to end their brutal and dangerous conflict. It would have been better, of course, if the Security Council had possessed the power—in the form of an international police force—to enforce its edicts. But the truth is that it does not. And it must plead where it cannot command. Even so, it may be forging patterns for future action—action in which nations, schooled through experience to trust in its authority, will give it real power.

On The Wrong Track

George F. Kennan, chief policy planner for the State Department, would not have been sent to Paris if the European statesmen meeting there had not rather flagrantly misinterpreted the Marshall Plan which they are presumably trying to implement. Secretary Marshall has been eager to have the European countries work out their own program of mutual aid without direct American participation. It was to be an European—not an American—plan. The chief emphasis was to be on what war-torn Europe could do toward restoration of its own economy. But the men who have gathered at Paris have come to think less and less in terms of what Europe can do for itself and more and more of what aid they can get from the United States.

We can understand how war-impoverished countries are inclined to lay their burdens at the door of the United States. That always seems the easiest way out. Politicians who are always apprehensive about confronting the people with stark realities are driven almost inevitably to grasp any helping hand that is held out without bothering about the stern measures which the situation demands. The tragic prospect is, however, that if the 16 nations represented at the Paris conference propose the type of program that is now taking shape, it will be a colossal fizzle.

Information reaching the State Department is to the effect that current plans are leading toward requests from the United States totaling upwards of 30 billion dollars in the next five years. The suggestion of such an enormous draft on American resources would produce a coolness toward the whole undertaking that the Administration might find it impossible to overcome. Worse than that, however, is the paucity of constructive planning at Paris to justify a large American investment in Europe's future. Indeed, the indications are that the Europeans are talking more in terms of relief than of reconstruction. Proposals of that sort would be utterly out of line with the Marshall Plan. What Secretary Marshall said in his speech at Harvard University was: "Any assistance that this Government may render in the future should provide a cure rather than a mere palliative."

These views must have been conveyed to the statesmen of Europe by Undersecretary of State Clayton and other American spokesmen. It is a source of much discouragement that they have been given so little heed. What the United States has asked is not that Europe knuckle down to Washington. It has pleaded for just the opposite policy—a policy that would permit European nations to stand on their own feet, economically as well as politically. The schemes which would make Europe far more dependent upon us are coming from Paris and not from Washington. Political leaders who are sensitive on the point of not bowing to Washington ought to realize that the plans they are devising would, in the long run, produce just the effect that they are seeking to avoid, even if those plans could be regarded as acceptable on this side of the Atlantic.

Income Gains

The Department of Commerce reports that in 1946 per capita income for the country as a whole attained an all-time high average of $1200, or more than double the 1940 average. During the first half of this year also the flow of income has been maintained at record high levels. Of course, it would be a grave mistake to measure gains in national wealth and well-being in terms of increases in per capita income. Judged by such standards, the Chinese people with their fantastically inflated prices would be objects of envy instead of compassion. To obtain an idea of the material progress of the average American since 1940 it is necessary to make allowance for the diminishing purchasing power of the dollar reflected in the rise in prices of consumer goods during the interim period.

Since the beginning of 1941, the Bureau of Labor Statistics consumers' price index for city families of moderate income has risen 57 per cent, although food costs alone have nearly doubled, while clothing costs are 83 per cent higher than in 1940. Because a large part of the increases in living costs have occurred since VJ-Day, following abandonment of price controls, the public is inclined to doubt whether the rise in money incomes reflects real gains in material well-being. Yet the record speaks for itself; prices of the goods and services that an average city family of moderate income would customarily buy have not on the whole risen nearly as rapidly as average money incomes. Hence for all our grumbling over high prices, it appears that most of us are better off now than we were in 1940. That holds true even if allowance is made for increases in taxes since 1940, which reduce average per capita disposable income to $1082—a 90 per cent increase over the 1940 average.

To be sure, many individuals are exceptions to the general rule. Persons living on fixed annuities are hard pressed and many salaried employes, especially those in the upper income groups, have not received increases in pay sufficient to compensate them for the rise in living costs. On the other hand, some wage earners have more than doubled their income in recent years, while farm incomes have gone up by leaps and bounds. It is also important to note that in some sections of the country the increase in per capita income has been well above the average. In a number of the agricultural States of the South and Northwest, for instance, average per capita income in 1946 was from two and a half to three times as large as the 1940 average. Yet the per capita income of the Southeast was still one third below the national average and that of the Southwest one fourth lower.

Thus it will be seen that the growth in size of national income has been accompanied by geographical changes in income distribution that result in the residents of some sections being a great deal better off than they were before the war, while other parts of the country have lost ground, comparatively speaking. Taking the country as a whole, however, the rise in money incomes, reflected in a doubling of per capita income, is not merely a monetary gain. For the actual volume, as distinct from the value of national production, is today far above prewar levels, although below the wartime peak, when a large proportion of our output was going into the manufacture of munitions and supplies for the armed forces. Judged by prewar standards, therefore, the American people are enjoying real, not illusory, prosperity at present.

Seven Against Rome

The story of the beheading of a Roman Catholic priest named Father Buselitch and the beating of a bishop named Msgr. Ukmar by a Communist mob which disrupted a confirmation ceremony at a place called Lanischie in Yugoslavia is likely to aggravate the uproar recently occasioned by the seven American clergymen, who, after a brief visit to that country, reported that a state of perfect religious freedom exists there under the beneficent regime of Marshal Tito. Meanwhile, an Italian language newspaper, published at Trieste, reported that the body of Father Kristan, a priest of Tolazzo in Istria, who had mysteriously disappeared last week, had been found in a condition which bore evidence of "horrible torture."

While it might be well, until fuller details are available, to reserve judgment concerning the responsibility for these particular murders, we must say that, in view of all that is known concerning the character of Marshal Tito's regime, and the firm grip exercised over the whole country by the notorious OZNA, or secret police, the statement of the seven clergymen seems rather difficult to swallow. It is, in fact, explicitly contradicted in almost every detail by Mr. Reuben H. Markham, a former Congregational missionary to the Balkans and subsequently a newspaper correspondent there. In his book called Tito's Imperial Communism, which is to be published next week by the University of North Carolina Press, Mr. Markham asserts that one of Tito's cardinal policies is the forcible suppression of both Orthodox and Catholic forms of Christianity as the foremost obstacles to his purpose of welding the youth of Yugoslavia into a fanatical instrument obedient to the will of the Kremlin.

Meanwhile, in an article in the current issue of the New Leader, Mr. Markham reproaches his fellow Protestants for having permitted their historic prejudices to blind them to the realities of the danger in which all European Christianity has been placed by Tito's rise to power. "Too many Protestants," he asserts, "are still following the brave old Gustavus Adolphus into the battle of Lutzen and stern old Oliver Cromwell into Ireland." He goes on to warn them that, in making common cause with Tito and the Yugoslav Communists, they may "pour out their own Protestant baby with the Catholic bath." He is not, he insists, defending the Roman Catholic Church. "I am defending the Protestant Church . . . I know from long, sad experience that the Communists are the enemies of the Christian religion in every form and that all Protestants, who because of animosity toward Roman Catholicism have joined hands or voices with world communism, are actually engaged in a crusade against Protestantism."

THE GIFT OF WATER

The watering trough along the steep road holds spring water in its moss-patched oaken planks.
Here through a hundred blazing summers paused horses and men to bow heads and give thanks for mountain water, icy cold and clear, shadowed by climbing hemlocks and old pines.

Today I halt, too, by the darkened box:
as my fathers bent their heads, now I bend mine in gratitude to him who built the trough, who hung this tin and dented dipper here on the homemade rusty nail for unknown travelers, giving his gift of water to the years.

Baltic Sovereignty

The former American Ambassador in Poland, the Honorable Arthur Bliss Lane, who has also served as American Minister in Riga, Latvia, in an article in Life magazine exposed the dire plight of Poland and has brought it to the attention of the American public. However, the Polish problem is only a part of the entire Northern-Central European problem. What about the Baltic states which flank Poland to the north?

The Baltic peoples have the same right to be the masters of their own lives as any other nation. Justice demands that the sovereignty of the Baltic states be restored, the Russian army and political police withdrawn, and the Baltic deportees and war prisoners returned from Russia where they are being held as slaves. This would be only in harmony with the Russian promises during the war, as the USSR in many international treaties and solemn declarations has voluntarily undertaken to respect the principles of the Atlantic and the United Nations Charters.

Now it has been definitely established that the Soviet Union has not fulfilled its obligations. Peace and a stable world order can exist only on the basis of justice, equity and honesty. The USSR for its own good should be persuaded to retreat to its frontiers of September 1, 1939, and stop the systematic annihilation and enslavement of the Baltic and other non-Russian nations.

"Quoddy Scheme"

Sunday I read The Washington Post and particularly the article "Decision Due On Use of United States Project To Train DPs."

I was surprised to see this project was actively being supported by one of our prominent Congressmen, who sought approval for the Quoddy project from WAA, the War Department, State Department, and Department of Justice. It was not until I read your statement of Frank Cohen's record and the great trust that was being placed in him, that I was firmly convinced that something was wrong.

When I got to the editorial page and I finished reading your article "Quoddy Scheme" and saw your cartoon "Oh, No! Not You Again!" you succeeded in expressing in a very precise manner exactly how I reacted to the facts. Being just another citizen, I know there are others who must have felt as I did.

For your honest and impartial presentation of the facts, the undersigned wishes to express his appreciation for so valuable a service.

Union Recognition

We are told in The Washington Post of August 24 that if a union fails to meet Taft-Hartley Act requirements it will not be recognized as the representative of workers. Not only would it not be recognized, but if in an election conducted by the NLRB at the request of another recognized union, 99 workers voted for the union which NLRB did not recognize and one worker voted for the other union, the 99 ballots could be voided, and the union with the support of one worker could represent all 100. This ruling, we are further told, comes from Robert N. Denham, NLRB general counsel, who recently consulted with Messrs. Hartley and Ball concerning the way the law should be administered.

After a ruling of this sort, little is left of the concept "workers may belong to unions of their own choosing," which was once the law of the land. What would remain of our political democracy if ballots could be similarly disregarded?

The recent Washington Post editorial which stated that years could pass before the full meaning of the Taft-Hartley Act would be known underestimated the speed with which the evil contents of this legislative pandora's box are being ragged forth to confuse labor-management relations and provoke industrial strife.

Reducing The Debt

If the Administration is going to have a surplus, as reports up this way indicate, let said surplus be applied to a reduction of the national debt! After all, to talk of surpluses while our national debt is so large is double-talk of the most insidious brand.

Palestine Violence

I would like to comment on the letter of Miss Mary L. Mason in your issue of August 22.

Miss Mason asks whether the remedy for inhumanity is more inhumanity. That is like asking whether the remedy to Hitler's concentration camps was the war on the German people.

In all history, when a government violates man's basic concepts of humanity and decency, and when peaceful attempts to end its abuses are made impossible, man has either used force to depose it or has himself degenerated to the level of the aggressor. To the extent that man respects himself and his ideals and is willing to fight to defend them—to that extent man marches forward. That force often results in the death of followers, or even innocent agents of the aggressor is tragic; but no more tragic than the deaths of the volunteers who fight to defend human ideals.

I fully agree with Miss Mason that revenge is like a boomerang and may hit your own head the heaviest blow of all. But I am afraid she reveals a basic lack of understanding of the Palestine situation if she considers the actions of the Irgun as revenge. They are not. They are the response of a freedom-loving people to a long and bitter period of suppression.

"Third Degree"

I commend The Washington Post for its very fine analysis of the Americans for Democratic Action protest against third degree police tactics. The editorial of August 25 referred to the unfavorable action of colored citizens to the gun-toting law. Many of them rightly believe this law may give to some of the prejudiced policemen added power to molest citizens without warrant to search. Then, too, there may linger in the minds of some what militia and police have done in so-called race riots when colored citizens have been deprived of means of protection and they become easy prey for both the moronic whites and the forces of law and order.

One point made in the editorial needs emphasis. Too many bad Negroes are loosed upon the community after crimes with deadly weapons because of the philosophy of judges and the social system. In May of this year 17 Negroes killed other Negroes in the environs of St. Louis. A few years ago the manslaughter rate in Alexandria was about one per month. One of the reasons ascribed is that if a Negro kills a white man he is likely to get the full penalty, but if his victim is another Negro he is likely to get off with from 5 to 10 years or less.

Then when he returns to his community he comes back with the reputation of a bad man and killer. This sort of thing causes others to realize that society does not consider this type of homicide on a plane with murder. The late Gov. Cole Blease told his constituents when criticized for wholesale pardoning of murderers that the State could not afford to pay for the maintenance of so many in jails, and that they ought to be out working for the community. He illustrated thus: "Which of you farmers kills one of his mules because one kicks another to death? You all know what happens if a Negro kills a white man."

Of course, the fundamental cause for so much of criminality ascribed to Negroes lies at the doorstep of the social community. Bad housing, slum districts, poor schools and above all restrictions as to jobs put a low premium on decent living. Segregation, covenants, and general race prejudice put all Negroes in the condition of American pariahs. There is no wonder that petty crimes, and rackets attract the uneducated, uncultured and even many who have become frustrated because of the restrictions due to color or race.

The reduction of crime and homicides will not come about through brutal police action nor going after gun toters. The removal of limitations in the way of fuller American living for the deserving regardless of race or color will do more to raise the moral level of our communities.

E. B. HENDERSON.

Falls Church, Va.

Thank God we have a newspaper in Washington that still believes in the democratic principles upon which our Nation was founded and hasn't yet boarded the reactionary bandwagon of the day. I refer to The Washington Post's articles and editorials condemning police brutality as practiced in the Nation's Capital—especially your most recent editorial "Third Degree" (August 25) which without a doubt registered a long nourished and growing resentment of the colored citizens of Washington (as well as all other decent Americans) of the "gestapo" tactics employed by the District police in handling citizens.

I hardly believe that there is a citizen in Washington who respects the forces of law and order more than I But I respect them only as guardians of our civil rights and servants of the public; not as enforcers of personal will and masters of the people This present method of "Hitlerized brutality" does everything but win the respect, appreciation and confidence of District citizens. Unless immediate and effective steps are taken to rectify this deplorable condition, serious consequences can result in the relationship of the District police and the people of Washington who must depend upon them for civil protection.

The Washington Post and the Washington Chapter of the Americans for Democratic Action are to be highly commended for the good work both are doing to rid our Capital of civil injustice and racial and religious intolerance.

Rivalry For Germany

BERLIN—When you actually come up against the German people, it is with a shock of surprise. You see them pulling and pushing carts piled with wood. You see skinny children playing in ruins. You see them working in vegetable gardens in the despoiled Tiergarten that was once the pride of Berlin.

Why, you say to yourself, these are the herrenvolk — the master race. These are the people who set out to conquer the world. So powerful was the force of the Hitler propaganda, it is hard to realize that this is the same herrenvolk that now stands respectfully to one side as an American military car passes.

Americans working with the Germans during the past two years describe their attitude as between servility and sullenness. Their surface submissiveness is partly due to a state of shock. They have not yet recovered from the crushing defeat of two years ago.

Germany is still a vacuum, in the view of able observers. To put it another way, the surface of the German mind has been wiped clean by the events of the past eight years. War and defeat were a vast cataclysm which left the German people exhausted and drained of all feeling.

Now, in the midst of ruin, former allies are competing for a revived Germany. That is the real meaning of what is happening here from day to day. It is clear in almost every event that occurs.

For example, recently the Russians in their zone granted amnesty to all nominal former members of the Nazi Party. That is to say, they cleared of blame hundreds of thousands who could show that they joined the party merely to keep jobs or pensions. American officials regarded this as a move on the part of the Russians to win the confidence of the Germans. The Americans knew that they could never bring all the little Nazis to trial in German courts at this late date, so some such move was inevitable in the American zone too. But the Russians beat us to it with a sweeping gesture.

IN THE contest between the Russians on the one hand and the Americans and British on the other, the Soviets have employed a constant stream of propaganda to the effect that denazification is not being pushed in the other zones. While playing this propaganda line, they in their own zone have forgiven many Nazis who agreed to participate in the Communist-dominated Socialist Unity Party.

The contest over Germany is growing more intense. It reflects the increasing bitterness of opposition between East and West all over the world. The Russians apparently believed that all of Germany would be their prize with the war's end. They counted on a triumph of communism coming out of ruin and despair.

Long before the Soviets took power in 1917, a union of German technical and organizing capacity with Russian mass and Russian resources was an objective of czarist policy. In the immediate aftermath of World War II, Soviet officials often talked frankly of their expectations. At the time of the Potsdam Conference, Vice Foreign Commissar Andrei Vishinsky told an American diplomat that very soon Germany would be a Communist state.

EVENTS HAVE not happened according to the Soviet timetable. Evidence accumulates that even in their own zone the Soviets have fallen far short of mass conversion to communism. Their failure baffles and frustrates them. Because they cannot accept any flaw in the religion of communism, they must find a villain to blame.

This partly explains their mounting fear, suspicion and cries of "Fascist." It is why some observers believe a new purge inside Russia is likely.

At the same time, this is a critical movement in the American occupation of Germany. Basic decisions cannot any longer be avoided. The process of compromise has been stretched far to cover policy up to now. It hardly seems possible to stretch it further.

The man of the crisis is one of the most remarkable Americans to come out of the war—Gen. Lucius D. Clay, military governor. There are generals and generals. Lieut. Gen. John C. H. Lee has made a fool of himself in his little principality in Italy, indulging in the same luxuries and love of pomp that made him slightly ridiculous and not a little offensive all during the war. The Clay story is an entirely different story. Even those disagreeing with the direction of American policy concede that Clay has performed a heroic task under almost impossible circumstances. The man and the job will be the theme of several columns to follow.

British View of Prices

As a Welsh visitor to your beautiful city, I am very surprised to find that food prices have soared so high.

In Great Britain as most people are aware, we are unable to obtain enough even of the necessities of life. To an interested observer like myself, it is truly an education to go in your big stores and see plenty of everything which I have not seen for many years in Great Britain. It amazes me that in this self-supporting country (truly the land of Goshen) prices should be so exorbitant.

British Crisis

By Andre Visson

Report On Europe: IV

THE PRESENT British crisis was predicted by economic experts. But for the Englishman in the street it came rather as a surprise and as a great injustice. He could not imagine that his scarce rations of food, coal and clothing could be still further reduced. The wartime restrictions, so normal during the six years of war, became, indeed, an irritating and somewhat humiliating burden after the victory.

There is no more rationing in the United States. Americans can buy freely not only all their own products, but also English clothing, shoes and liquor which are unobtainable in England because England had to sell them to the United States for dollars to buy her food and indispensable raw materials.

And what is even more vexing, the peoples of Europe, to whose liberation the British have so greatly contributed along with the Americans, live today much better than do the English. One of the greatest paradoxes in the Europe of 1947 is that the Englishman who won the war must go to Italy, which lost the war, in order to bask in prewar luxuries. Now even this brief respite from English austerity will become impossible since the British treasury is reducing the amount of money which one can take abroad to £5 ($20). Men and women of England are told that they will have to tighten their belts further if they want their country's prewar economy to be restored.

"WE WORK or we want!" Those words on huge billboards pursue the English in the streets of their cities and on the roads of their country. Some English psychologists wonder whether this government appeal is psychologically correct. The threat of want is, perhaps, not the best of incentives. High taxes and low rations, with the threat of still higher taxes and still lower rations, make life as dull as the English "bill of fare," which is now unquestionably much duller than it ever was before the war.

English Conservatives and Liberals—and their opinion is shared by a number of American observers—believe that the socialization policy of the Labor government and, especially, the introduction of a five-day week in the coal mines, are considerably slowing down England's recovery. The Labor government, on the other hand, claims that its economic policy is the best possible one for speeding up England's indispensable adjustments to changing conditions both at home and abroad.

The Labor government is trying hard to cut England's national cake into the greatest possible number of slices. It wants to convince England's lower classes that their slices are bigger today than they were before the war. Mr. Herbert Morrison claimed at the Margate conference that 90 per cent of the English people who have the lowest incomes command 67 per cent of England's total national purchasing power today, as compared to 55 per cent before the war.

THE AMERICAN loan helped the Labor government to achieve this result. But with the approaching exhaustion of the loan, the entire national cake which the Labor government can offer to the English people is going to be smaller than it was in 1947. And as a result, the slices cut for England's lower classes risk becoming much smaller than they were in 1938.

Some Conservative and Liberal economists contend, indeed, that those slices are already smaller. They point out that England's official index of retail prices, which admitted only a 30 per cent rise since 1938, did not reflect the real situation with regard to the purchasing power of English currency.

A number of people with lower incomes complain that they live worse than they did in 1938, despite a 45 per cent raise of their wages. A London bus conductor earning $17.40 a week, and a clerk in a London insurance company making $39 a week—approximately 45 per cent more than they made in 1938—complain that they and their families are more poorly clothed and fed than before the war. But, at the same time, these men recognize that they have more free hours than they had before the war.

A few additional hours of leisure appears to be the main incentive which the Labor government can offer to its people. And, at the same time, the government invites Englishmen to work more if they wish to escape want.

POLITICALLY and socially, England is unquestionably much healthier than are France and Italy. But the restoration of England's prewar economy is certainly a much more delicate and arduous task than a similar job in France or even in Italy. With their agriculture properly organized, France and Italy could feed their populations. But in order to feed her 47 million inhabitants, England needs to import food just as she needs to import raw materials for the production of exportable goods. How can England pay for the imported food and raw material?

The main sources of England's prewar wealth were export of coal; export of manufactured products; income from British investments in overseas countries, and income from services such as banking, shipping, insurance.

England expects to recover her prewar position in shipping and, perhaps, in trade. The greatest part of her current production is reserved for export. But it is much harder for the British to regain their prewar position in insurance and in banking. British currency is stable enough to inspire confidence for short-range commercial operations. But it is not stable enough for use in long-range deals and investments.

British coal cannot be exported. There is not enough coal mined in England even for her own industrial production and for heating purposes. As to England's investments, those in the Western Hemisphere have been sold to finance her war effort; and those in eastern and central Europe have been lost as a result of the expansion of Soviet control.

IT IS NOT an English characteristic to be defeatist. But a number of people from England's prewar ruling classes admit that they will never be able to recover their privileged position.

This does not mean that England and what formerly was known as the British Empire are doomed, as Soviet leaders in Moscow want to believe, and as some Americans fear. England is determined to survive, but her economy will have to be adjusted to the radically changed economic conditions at home and abroad. It is not excluded that while in the summer of 1947 England needs to import DPs to compensate her shortage of manpower, five years from now she may have to export a few millions of Englishmen overseas in order to assure a better equilibrium of her national economy.

A number of English statesmen, heartily supported in their view by England's common people, believe that England can, if necessary, solve her economic problems without any American help. It will only take more time and require more sacrifices at home, some of which may hurt American trade. A number of Englishmen are convinced that in a couple of years the Americans, unable to sell their goods abroad, will offer them to England on a "silver tray" of extended credit. But the majority of responsible English leaders feel that political considerations do not allow England and the United States to risk an economic war. British-American disunity can be of benefit only to Moscow.

Thus, England's fate is definitely tied to that of the United States; and that is why so many Englishmen, regardless of their party affiliations, indulge in criticizing the United States and the American foreign policy, especially in the economic field. They want to prove to us that we need England politically, strategically, and even economically, as badly as England needs the United States. And they want to prove to themselves that they are—and will remain—an independent people enjoying the freedom of speech which both they and we are determined to maintain.

Britain In Crisis

By Barnet Nover

Between The Devil And The Sea

THE NEW STEPS which the Labor government has taken and is about to take to husband Britain's dwindling supply of dollars represent as heroic an effort at belt-tightening as any democratic people has ever been asked to accept in peacetime.

NOVER

It is argued, and with considerable point, that had these measures been taken earlier, Britain's plight would not now be as serious as it is. Once again, say the Labor government's critics, Britain's curse has been "too little and too late."

In all fairness, however, it is well to bear in mind that the choice before the Labor regime was one between the devil and the deep blue sea.

Not only are the austerity measures now being put in force full of political dynamite (well-remembered is last summer's violent outcry against bread rationing), but they may prove economically debilitating as well. In other words, the bitter medicine which John Bull is being asked to swallow can, unless properly administered, aggravate his financial anemia rather than cure it.

FOR INSTANCE, the decision to cut food imports may lead to a considerable saving of dollars. Yet if a decrease in rations leads to a lowering of the morale and vitality of the British workers and thus in a reduction of their productive capacity the net result may be harmful rather than beneficial.

In the long run Great Britain can only emerge from the slough of despond if her exports are very greatly expanded. They cannot expand unless production is increased and the output of the individual worker goes up so that Great Britain can compete on a cost basis with other exporting countries.

IT IS HARDLY surprising, then, that having to make a choice between evils, the Labor government adopted the Micawber attitude that something would turn up that would make it unnecessary to impose new austerity measures on the British people.

By the same token it waited, some critics argue, an unconscionably long time before approaching the United States to modify the so-called convertibility clause in the American loan agreement.

Yet here again the choice was not between doing the right thing but between one evil and another.

THE CONVERTIBILITY clause provided that after July 15, 1947, people who had British pounds, which they had received for current sales, but wanted American dollars could get those pounds exchanged for dollars.

In other words, Argentines or South Africans or Canadians or Swedes who had sold goods to British importers for which they had got sterling could do more with that sterling than pay for purchases from Great Britain. Since the dollar is a currency that everybody wants, sterling holdings, by virtue of the convertibility clause would, it was felt, become as desirable as dollar holdings into which they could be transferred at will.

EVEN THE authoritative London Economist, a bitter critic of the Labor government's use of the American loan, viewed the prospect of convertibility on July 15 with equanimity.

In its issue of July 19 it declared that "it is unlikely that there will be any resultant pressure on British gold and dollar reserves in the near future . . . The drain on gold and dollar reserves, which, unfortunately, seems likely to continue, will reflect the direct deficit in the British balance with the dollar area payments (i. e. surplus of imports over exports). It will not be part of the price which Britain is paying for completing the arrangements for the free transferability of current sterling."

Indeed, the Economist argued that the result of convertibility would, on balance, be favorable to Great Britain rather than reverse since it would tend to restore Great Britain as a world banker.

"The life of the City of London," it said, "depends on sterling being international currency."

WHAT ACTUALLY happened was that just as soon as convertibility of sterling into dollars became a fact many holders of sterling asked for dollars. How great this run was can be gauged by the fact that in the six weeks beginning June 29 she was using up only 60 million dollars a week for her own needs while her total drain on her dollar reserves amounted to around 115 million dollars weekly.

Now that convertibility has been suspended this extra drain on Britain's now very limited dollar holdings has been stopped. On the other hand there is, by the same token, less incentive on the part of many exporting countries throughout the world to sell to Great Britain.

It would be too much to say that the remedy—the suspension of convertibility—is worse than the disease. It is certainly no cure.

AFL Sets Stage For Court Tests Of Labor Law

By Charles H. Herrold
United Press Staff Writer

The American Federation of Labor yesterday paved the way for possible court tests of the Taft-Hartley labor law's anti-Communist provision and its stipulation that unions may be held liable for damages.

George Q. Lynch, president of the Pattern Makers League (AFL), ignored a National Labor Relations Board ruling that only the board's non-Communist affidavits would be acceptable if a union wants to use its services.

He instructed union officials not to file the NLRB affidavits, but to use affidavit forms provided by the union. He filled out one of his own forms and sent it to John P. Frey, president of the AFL metal trades department, for filing with the NLRB.

Lynch objected to the NLRB forms on grounds they were too vague about "front" organizations the board considers Communist-dominated. He maintained his stand even after the board ruled that only its own forms would be valid.

The AFL fight against the law's damage-suit provision was touched off by a suit filed in the Federal District Court at Pittsburgh by the W. J. Dillner Transfer Co.

Unions Fear for Treasuries

The company seeks $485,000 from the AFL Teamsters Union and their international representative, Albert O. Dietrich. It alleges that seven work stoppages were called in violation of the union's contract.

The suit is one of five filed against unions, for a total of $1,285,000 or more under the new law. Labor union heads fear the law's provision will wipe out their treasuries.

There was a possibility that the CIO also might force a court test of the anti-Communist provision. The NLRB has ruled that the Geraldine Novely Co., Inc., of Gloversville, N. Y., must reinstate eight employes who were members of the CIO's Fur and Leather Workers Union. The union is headed by Ben Gold, an avowed Communist.

The NLRB adopted a hands-off policy toward Lynch's request that it name specifically the organizations it considers subversive. It said that if any list of Communist-front organizations is issued it will have to come from the Justice Department.

N. Y. Film Unions Set Truce

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—Mayor William O'Dwyer and 12 AFL unions engaged in motion picture production in New York City today signed an agreement in which the unions guaranteed there would be no jurisdictional strikes among their organizations for five years.

The agreement was reached in a move to encourage a greater portion of the movie production industry to move to New York.

Hannegan's Successor Still Problem

Who will succeed Postmaster General Robert E. Hannegan as Democratic National Chairman last night appeared more unsettled than ever.

It was reliably indicated that no definite decision on that score was reached at Hannegan's conference with the President Tuesday.

Hannegan meanwhile said he probably won't finally determine whether to resign for another two weeks. The Democratic chairman, who underwent an operation for hypertension, said his blood pressure is now normal and he wants to keep it that way.

In other quarters it was said that the job of finding a successor to Hannegan may be further complicated by vice presidential lightning.

Some of those who have been favorably considered for the chairmanship, notably Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson, have support as second man on the next Truman ticket.

Whoever accepts the party chairmanship will automatically take himself out of the vice presidential running.

Shipbuilding Strikers Urge Federal Action

By the United Press

Leaders of the Marine and Shipbuilding Workers (CIO) yesterday appealed for Government intervention in the eight-week strike of 35,000 workers in 10 East Coast shipyards.

President John Green told reporters that thousands of the strikers, on advice of the union, already have taken other jobs and the Government must act quickly if it wants to "preserve a skilled force in the shipbuilding industry."

Green and a strike delegation urged Howard Colvin, acting director of the new Federal mediation and conciliation service created by the Taft-Hartley Act, to arrange a strike-settlement meeting of union officials, representatives of the three companies involved and Navy and Maritime Commission officials. Colvin told reporters he had taken the request under advisement.

The union delegation also asked for help at the Navy Department, the Maritime Commission and the Labor Department.

Green told reporters that the struck companies—Bethlehem, Federal and the New York shipbuilding corporations—so far have refused to make a satisfactory wage offer.

He said the union is demanding a wage increase of 12 cents an hour across the board and continuation of most provisions of its old contract. The companies, in turn, have offered a 12 cent hourly pay boost limited to hourly workers only if the union gives up seniority, vacations, grievance machinery and other established contract provisions, he said.

Post Carrier Boys Take on New Load, Topped by Dessert

Wheaton, Md., Washington Post carrier boys had more than their papers to carry around yesterday morning.

Arthur S. Beall, distributor for the newspaper in the Wheaton area, loaded them with fried chicken, the trimmings, cake, candy and pink lemonade at a Glen Echo park outing Tuesday. Then he topped it off with all the cold watermelon they could eat.

The well-fed ones were: Dwaine Kitchen, Glenhaven; Gale Bartlett, Plyers Mill rd.; Tommy Jarrell, McKinney Hills; Raymond Smith, Forest Park; Jackie Frey and Gary Frey, Capital View; Bobby Crotts, McComas ave.; Wilbur Bonifant, McComas ave., David Carwithen, Kensington; Larry Archer, Glenmont, and Stanley Selbin, Layhill, Md.

11:00 a. m.—Charles P. Taft, president, Federal Council Churches of Christ in American, et al.

Wallace Urges That Liberals Take Control of Convention

New York, Aug. 27 (INS).—Henry Wallace urged "liberals" today to avoid the necessity of a choice between the Truman Administration and the Republicans in 1948 by winning control of the Democratic convention.

Wallace's Labor Day editorial, in the current issue of the New Republic which he edits, terms lack of political judgment the fact that some union officials have given up their independence by pledges to an Administration which has not earned progressive support.

He said that a Democratic victory in '48 rested on actually getting the forces of organized labor to ring doorbells and enthusiastically campaign for the Party's candidates.

No "liberal" can safely pledge support to this Administration at a time when our foreign policy includes the support of reactionaries everywhere, he said.

Radio Moscow Hints Concern Over Spies

London, Aug. 27 (U.P.).—Radio Moscow tonight expressed apprehension over the number of "foreign spies" in Russia.

"Hostile capitalistic countries are striving to send into our country twice and three times as many agents, spies and diversionists than into any bourgeois state," the broadcast said.

H. M. Havner Heads Spanish War Veterans

Kansas City, Aug. 27 (AP).—H. M. Havner, Des Moines, today became commander in chief of the United Spanish War eVterans in convention here.

His elevation to the post was automatic, since he had served the past year as senior vice commander.

Charles R. Barefoot, Toledo, Ohio, was advanced to senior vice commander.

Schuschnigg on Way Here

Genoa, Italy, Aug. 27 (U.P.).—Kurt Schuschnigg, prewar Chancellor of Austria, sailed yesterday aboard the liner Saturnia for the United States to deliver lectures.

Elizabeth Faces Royal Honeymoon In British Isles

London, Aug. 27.—Princess Elizabeth and Lieut. Philip Mountbatten, it is expected, will have to put aside any plans for a wedding trip abroad under the new ban on foreign travel announced tonight.

Quick interpretations of the ban indicate that after their marriage on November 20 the royal pair will have to be content with a wedding trip within the bounds of the United Kingdom. They could, of course, visit Eire, the currency of which is interchangeable with that of Britain. In any event, it is believed the couple will stay home, rather than have it said they were violating the spirit of the new ruling.

WAA to Sell Sutures

The War Assests Administration last night offered to sell unused but surplus surgival sutures which originally cost the Government $425,000. They will be sold by sealed bids by September 18, first to priority claimants and then to commerical buyers.

Export Nations Asked to Aid Hungary by 'Squeezing' Selves

Geneva, Switzerland, Aug. 27 (U.P.).—John Boyd Orr, director general of the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization, said today that exporting nations must "squeeze themselves" to supply a hungry world that cries for food, not statistics.

Orr called for urgent action on a "life or death" basis to increase Europe's dwindling larder. He had predicted yesterday that partial famine would envelop one billion persons this winter and next spring.

Regardless of what action is taken, he told the FAO conference here, neither Europe nor Asia will have enough food this winter.

Orr urged formation of a world food council with powers to enforce actions of individual governments.

Meanwhile, the months-old International Trade Conference deadlock between the United States and United Kingdom delegations continued. British Commonwealth delegates reportedly were engaged in an "urgent examination" of American requests for imperial preference concessions.

The southbound flight will leave here at 2:35 p. m. EST, arriving in Houston at 6:15 p. m. CST., to make connections with a no stop flight to Mexico City. The return flight will leave Houston at 4 p. m., CST, arriving in Washington at 9:20 p. m., EST.

Films Welcome Abroad

Hollywood.—Hollywood's role in world education was emphasized when five nations refunded duties on more than 50 Metro-Goldwyn-Maier films during the last 12 months because authorities considered them educational. Finland leads the list with 20, Egypt follows with 13, Palestine 13, Peru one, South Africa 61. Films, some 16-mm. versions, included Cary Wilson Miniatures, Pete Smith shorts, John Nesbitt Passing Parades, and James FitzPatrick Traveltalks.

Theme Music

Hollywood.—Producer Charles Hoffman and Director Irving Rapper have chosen "The Londonderry Air" as theme music for "The Voice of the Turtle" at Warner Bros.

Royal Inspiration

The green hunting dress that Joan Fontaine wears in a sequence of Paramount's "The Emperor Waltz" is an exact duplicate of a costume worn at a Royal Hunt in the Austrian Tyrol in 1900 by the Archduchess Maria Josefa. Edith Head, Paramount's top designer, copied the dress from a photograph of the Archduchess.

No Snooping

Mabel Paige, who has played an ubiquitous landlady in 107 films, gets a change of pace in the Evelyn Keyes-Glenn Ford comedy at Columbia, "The Mating of Millie." Everything important that happens around her apartment in the picture takes place while she's away from home.

Dud and Dick Fool 'Em

Hollywood.—Visitors to the sets of "Mourning Becomes Electra" invariably gaze in fascination at two distinguished figures and ask, "Who are those actors? I ought to know them." Neither, however, is an actor. They are Producer-Director Dudley Nichols, 6 feet 1, silver-maned, and Musical Director Richard Hageman, 6 feet 3, also silver-maned.

Raft Goes to Races

Hollywood.—George Raft has returned to RKO Radio to start work in his new starring vehicle, "Race Street," in which he will be teamed with William Bendix. Raft will play a former war correspondent reduced to handicapping race horses.

'Variety Girl' Runs 93 Minutes, Every Single One Ill-Spent

"VARIETY GIRL" which opens at the Palace today, purports to be a tribute to the Variety Club of America, an association of showmen dedicated to philanthropy. "Purports" is the word. As a tribute, it's comparable to hanging a wreath of poison ivy around Assault's neck. What it really looks like is another Paramount "Road" picture—this time the one that's paved with good intentions.

In spite of practically every big name on Paramount's acting roster, in spite of George Marshall as director and Frank Loesser as song writer, the film winds away for 93 incredible minutes and every single one is ill-spent. "Variety Girl" will be of most service to sour cynics who make their living pointing out the stupidity of Hollywood. In fact, it will come as no surprise to me if the producer of this mulligatawny turns out to be Evan L. Evans himself, seeking retribution for "The Hucksters."

Few Bright Spots

The only conceivable bright spots are a song by Pearl Bailey and a sequence about the making of a George Pal Puppetoon—but these are not really bright; just less dim. The atmosphere is too lethal even for Miss Bailey, who looks as though she might have a nice way with a song ordinarily. The Puppetoon shot was apparently inserted while a call-boy was dispatched to the commissary to see what roving performer might be indulged to ad lib a few lines.

For make no mistake about it, this picture was not prepared beforehand. It's spontaneous. It flashes on the screen exactly as it was first conceived in the brain-pan of a subnormal Pekinese.

The frame for this target is something about a Variety Club in Pittsburgh 18 years ago and how they adopted a baby that was abandoned in a movie house. Presumably the child's mother was frightened by a picture something like this one. If they had left the baby to its own devices, it would possibly have settled for the local popcorn concession and let it go at that. But she has to grow up and go to Hollywood and wander around meeting Gary Cooper, Barry Fitzgerald, Ray Milland ad infinitum. The only cheerful thing about this girl is that she develops a habit of pushing producers into swimming pools—an understandable urge.

Even Hope Unnerved

Mary Hatcher, who plays the Variety Girl, and Olga San Juan, who may play a neat game of backgammon, handle most of the footage, but it seems unfair to judge them on their work in this mess. But both of them are fine, spirited young women. Even Bob Hope is unnerved by his surroundings and his ad libs are even worse prepared than usual. Mr. Crosby, that lovable soul, would look much better playing third base for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Variety Clubs have a long record of generosity and kindness toward underprivileged children. Possibly they can now open up a Hollywood tent and do something for the underprivileged children there—the ones who made this picture.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Britain to Withdraw Troops From Greece

By Drew Pearson

(Editor's Note—While Drew Pearson is on vacation, the Washington Merry-Go-Round is being written by his old partner, Robert S. Allen.)

Another Greek "crisis" is in the works. The new hot potato probably will be laid in the United States lap soon after the reorganized Greek government takes office.

The Attlee government is preparing to pull out the bulk of its troops from Greece, compelling the United States to carry the burden of policing the strife-torn country as well as feeding and rebuilding it. The British have around 12,000 troops in Greece; the United States only a few hundred, chiefly specialists.

Attlee

The British plan to withdraw all but a token force, on the ground of poverty. Under the economy program announced by Exchequer Chancellor Hugh Dalton, the British will demobilize 80,000 men. Many of them will come from Greece and Italy.

The British have 30,000 in Italy. Chief reason for last week's suddenly announced change in United States plans to pull out of Italy was warning from Downing Street of intention to withdraw.

Establishment of a considerable United States force in Greece will further increase United States expenditures there. The cost will not be charged up to the 300-million-dollar Greek aid fund voted by Congress. It will appear on War Department books.

Note: The British are using the threat to withdraw troops from the European cockpit as a potent cudgel to pressure concessions from the United States. During the recent negotiations over easing the terms of the United States loan, the British delegation intimated they may have to withdraw their troops from Germany.

Significant Difference

President Truman's list of White House callers last week was significant for its emphasis on Democratic politics. The list included Senators Claude Pepper, Florida; Harley Kilgore, West Virginia; former Senator James Huffman, Ohio, and Wilson Wyatt, former Federal Housing Expediter.

A leader of the anti-Communist, liberal Americans for Democratic Action, Wyatt had not seen the President since last winter when the Kentuckian resigned after a row with George Allen, then RFC director, over inadequate financial support for Wyatt's housing plans. The President and Wyatt did not discuss housing during the call. They talked Democratic politics.

"That was a very fine speech you made in Chicago against a third party," the President complimented. "When you said a third party would help NAM and the Communists, you hit it right on the head."

Wyatt remarked he thought Democratic prospects looked promising for 1948.

"Yes," the President nodded in agreement, "I think our candidates have an excellent chance to win."

"From what I've observed," replied Wyatt, "I would say the outlook is very good for liberal candidates to win."

Hot Line

Representative Clare Hoffman, chairman of the Executive Expenditures Committee, is noted in the House for his razor-edged acerbity. Party lines make no difference to the scrappy, 73-year-old Michigander when it comes to throwing hot barbs.

Fellow Republican, Representative Clarence Brown, learned this painfully at a recent committee meeting. Generals and admirals were explaining budget requests when a clerk interrupted to say Brown was wanted on a long-distance call. As he hesitated for a moment, Hoffman snapped: "Oh, go on, go on. Better answer it quickly, Clarence. It may be from Philadelphia. Joe Pew is probably on the line again with instructions for you. You don't want to keep him waiting."

Note: Joseph N. Pew, multimillionaire Pennsylvania oil man and shipbuilder, is a power in the GOP.

Move to "Stop Dewey"

Wisconsin backers of Gov. Tom Dewey are getting hot under the collar over a "MacArthur for President" boom being vigorously pushed in the State. They are charging the boom is actually a "Stop Dewey" plot.

The Badger State's presidential primary next spring is the first in the Nation. Because of this, and the fact that Minnesota's hustling Harold Stassen has openly challenged Dewey for the Wisconsin indorsement, the New Yorker is very much on the spot. If he loses the test, he may find himself in Wendell Willkie's unhappy predicament in the 1944 fight.

That year, Dewey challenged Willkie in the Wisconsin primary and won. A week later, Willkie threw in the sponge and quit the GOP race. That eliminated Dewey's only formidable opponent and opened the way for his subsequent easy victory at the Chicago convention.

MacArthur, 67, claims Wisconsin as his home State. He lived there briefly years ago. He has been telling Tokyo visitors that when he retires he plans to take up permanent residence in Milwaukee. The city council has discussed a proposal to present him an estate.

A behind-the-scenes leader in the "MacArthur for President" boom is former Gov. Phil La Follette, who served on MacArthur's staff. Now practicing law in Madison, Phil is strongly anti-Dewey. Another leader who has indicated interest is Secretary of State Fred Zimmerman. One of the canniest politicos in Wisconsin, Zimmerman backed Dewey in 1944. If he should board the MacArthur wagon, it would be a major blow for Dewey. Zimmerman is noted for lining up with winners.

Note: Several leading Wisconsin newspapers have caustically assailed the MacArthur boom on the ground it is backed by "reactionary" elements.

Persons selling automobiles at premium prices had better include that extra money in their income tax returns.

The Treasury said yesterday its tax sleuths investigating used car dealer transactions of the OPA price ceiling days are finding frequent omissions of side money and profits obtained from evasion schemes.

The tax agents will begin checking unreported extra money from current premium price sales as soon as they catch up on their back work.

Secretary Snyder told reporters the latest case uncovered by the agents is against a dealer who "reported only $12,000 taxable income in three years, whereas agents discovered at least $100,000 additional profits" against which taxes and penalties will be sasessed. The dealer was not identified.

In another case, Snyder reported that an auto manufacturer cancelled the franchise of an unnamed new car dealer who was convicted of income tax invasion.

Without identifying persons or places, Snyder also cited these among cases in which the anti-tax evasion drive brought the Government $3,120,000 in extra taxes:

An $848,000 assessment, plus possible criminal charges, against a southwestern fruit company for failure to report profits from one of its principal imports of tropical fruits.

A $500,000 tax bill against a western contractor on concealed profits made during the war handling Army contracts and selling and renting construction equipment to other contractors.

A midwestern group of liquor dealers has been assessed $1,445,000 for evading taxes for profits from "black market sales of liquor in their own States and from sales to bootleggers in the dry State of Mississippi."

Foes Say Dutch Subs Patrol Sunda Strait

Batavia, Java, Aug. 27 (AP).—The Indonesian army said tonight a Dutch submarine flotilla was patrolling narrow Sunda Strait, possibly to intercept any Republican leaders who might attempt to cross from Java to Sumatra to establish a new Indonesian capital.

The Indonesians have announced plans to transfer their capital to the island of Sumatra in the event the Dutch drive on the Java city of Jogjakarta, the present capital.

A Netherlands army communique said the Republican army had committed 500 separate violations of the United Nations cease-fire order since midnight August 4, with Dutch casualties since then listed as 85 killed, 234 wounded and two missing.

The Republicans renewed charges that a Dutch warplane strafed civilians in villages in west Java. They also said tank-supported Dutch patrols were active on Moedera Island and the east coast of Java.

East Indians Blamed For Armistice Break

Four representatives from new governments in Indonesia told a news conference here yesterday that it was the Soekarno-led East Indians who broke the armistice requested by the United Nations and not the Dutch.

Further, they expressed fear that the Soekarno-led Republicans of Java and Sumatra would be permitted to extend their rule over the eastern islands, and professed satisfaction with Dutch-offered terms for the future.

The group included the Sultan of West Borneo, Sjarif Alkdarie, and the Prime Minister of East Indonesia, Tjokorde Soekawati.

Alkdarie said Soekarno-led troops were indulging in "murder of hundreds daily in Java, as well as in the burning of factories."

Strike Stirs Pacific Isle Ex-Paradise

Suva, Fiji Islands, Aug. 27 (U.P.).—Trade unionism has broken out among coconut pickers in the Solomon Islands and 7000 natives have gone on a sitdown strike for a 1200 per cent wage increase and a European diet, reports from the former South Sea Island paradise said today.

Accounts reaching Suva said the strikers have formed a sort of jungle trade union called the "Marching Rule" on the island of Malaita, 80 miles east of Guadalcanal, and are getting ready to present their demands to the British administration based at Guadalcanal.

According to an American airman who landed on Malaita recently, the natives have been drilling with spears and blowpipes and putting their war canoes into commission as part of the preparations to negotiate their demands.

John F. Nicoll, acting British commissioner in the western Pacific, denied reports the natives had declared war on the British and were preparing to invade Guadalcanal, but he admitted there are serious signs of open disturbance.

The government has offered the natives a 100 per cent wage increase, but the natives are firm in their demands for a 1200 per cent rise, which would bring their wages up to 12 pounds (48) a month.

The natives learned about unions and sitdown strikes from American troops who occupied Guadalcanal. They also learned to like the strangers' diet and now are demanding that they be fed canned meat, biscuits, sugar, tea and similar things.

According to William Hudson, a correspondent for the Sydney (Australia) Sun, the sitdown strike has been going on for almost a year and copra production, the only industry, is virtually at a standstill.

Wrinkle Resistant Developed for Cotton Fabrics

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—George A. Harris, president of Dan River Mills announced today the development of a new chemical process that makes cotton goods "wrinkle resistant."

He said the first garments treated with the new finish would be on the market by November or December.

The process, which renders cotton fabrics equally wrinkle resistant with worsted and woolen goods is the result of four years intensive research in collaboration with Monsanto Chemical Co.

Harris said the process was based on a secret synthetic resin formula which previously had been applied successfully to woolen fabrics so as to make them washable.

Output Index In July Drops For 4th Month

By S. Oliver Goodman

July industrial production dropped for the fourth consecutive month, the Federal Reserve Board reported last night.

The board's seasonally adjusted index, which takes the 1935-39 average as 100, declined to 178 in July—6 points below June and 12 points below the March postwar high of 190.

Explaining that the decrease between June and July was due "in part to influences of a temporary nature," the board added that "scattered information now available indicates a somewhat higher level for August than July."

Discussing the production downturn, the board noted especially:

Steel output dropped markedly during the first two weeks of July "when a coal shortage seemed imminent."

Auto output also declined somewhat in July and showed a further reduction in the first half of August, "with production still limited by the sheet steel shortage."

Retail trade was generally maintained and prices rose during July and also the first half of August.

Activity in shipbuilding was sharply reduced by strikes, and there was a moderate decline in machine industry activity.

Textile output was further reduced, "owing in part to vacations of production workers but also to earlier slackening of demand."

VETERANS NOTE: The District of Columbia Bankers Association announced yesterday that all local banks will require original discharge certificates as identification when war veterans seek to cash terminal leave bonds. This is a protective measure for both veterans and banks. Terminal leave bond payments will start next Tuesday.

ODD LOTS: The 43,340 shares of new Potomac Electric Power Co. 3.60 per cent preferred stock available for public offering sold rapidly yesterday and a premium price over the 51¾ is expected before the week ends. WELCOME NEWS: Small cans of food containing one or two servings will be back in grocery stores this fall for first time since war. They will be available in limited quantities at first, and can manufacturers said rate at which supplies improve will depend on tin plate situation. Packing in cans containing 1 to 1½ cupfuls was eliminated by Government shortly after Pearl Harbor to conserve tin and steel. Chief complaints about larger sized cans come from small families or persons living alone who cannot finish the larger portion at one meal and either have no facilities for keeping leftovers or don't like to keep small amounts for another day.

Haefner Saves 6-5 Victory for Nats

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THE IMMENSITY of Johnny Mize's job, if he has set himself to the task of breaking Babe Ruth's home run record of 60 in a single season, is clearly pointed up by the fact that he must hit 19 homers in the Giants' remaining 32 games. That's a lot of home runs on short notice.

POVICH

Mize's present total of 42 homers is impressive enough to make an engaging possibility of his chances of breaking Ruth's record. And it is a fact that his present pace is a couple of days ahead of Ruth's home run production in 1927 when the Babe set the record. But Ruth poured it on in the final month of that season, hitting 17 homers in September, only one shy of the all-time record for monthly homer production—Rudy York's collection of 18 homers in August, 1937.

It's no accident that August and September are the big home run months, and that fact is in Mize's favor. That's when the big guys are swinging against tired pitching arms, overworked from double headers and frayed by heavy duty. They're not swinging at as much stuff in the last two months of the season. Fast balls are not as fast, curves aren't so sharp, and it's no coincidence that the two big homer months of Ruth and York were the last two months.

THAT'S WHEN MANY of the clubs are bringing up the rookie pitchers from their farm teams for a preview before the next season's spring training, and as a rule they're tired and overworked, too. It's traditional that the pitching is never as good in August and September but it's not all one-sided in favor of the hitters.

Autumn brings the bothersome late-afternoon shadows to the big league ball parks, with the shade often falling across the pitching path from the mound to the plate. Rick Ferrell, of the Nats, pointed that out several seasons ago when he refused to be enthusiastic about the apparently effective pitching of a couple of rookie Washington southpaws, Joe Krakauskas and Ken Chase.

"I never liked to judge rookie pitchers by what they do in the last month," said Ferrell. "They have the advantage of those shadows that are annoying to the hitters. The ball comes out of the gleaming light into the shade around the plate and it's not so easy to follow. I'd rather judge them by what they do in the spring." In the cases of Chase and Krakauskas, he was right. They both flopped.

ORDINARILY, I DON'T like to toss a mess of figures at the clients but in the Mize vs. Ruth home-run battle they do tell a story. When Ruth smacked his 60 homers 20 years ago, he averaged roughly one home run for each three games of the season. That pace was good enough to hoist him to new fame as a home run champion, and now let's see what Mize is confronted with.

Mize needs 19 homers to surpass Ruth's mark. He has 32 games remaining in which to get them. That means he must average, approximately, three home runs in every five remaining games. That's a rough assignment, as is indicated by the fact that in reaching his present total of 42, he has been hitting homers on an average of only one every three games. He'll have to step it up sharply.

When he did get his 60 homers, it was only the third time Ruth himself had achieved more than 50. That 10-homer area between 50 and 60 takes considerable doing, and its' tougher after the 55-mark is reached. In different seasons, Jimmy Foxx and Hank Greenberg got up to 58 circuit swats but missed Ruth's mark. There's no reason for Mize to suffer from overconfidence.

MEANWHILE, THERE'S a pretty sort of story being told by the American League batting figures. There's a new name at the top of the league batting race and it's spelled W-l-l-i-a-m-s. It was a long haul for tall Ted, but there he is out in front with an average of .343 this morning, 12 points ahead of Lou Boudreau, the second man.

The paradox is that Williams doesn't think he's having a good season, yet he's leading the league. Any time Williams is hitting below .350, he thinks he is having a poor year. He's plainly disgusted with his inability to get above that figure, and blames it on the league's pitchers who issue him too many walks. He thinks the ball is dead, too.

Other guys who might lead the league would be fairly happy about it, but not Williams. He wasn't kidding that day in St. Louis when, after the Browns' pitcher walked him for the third time, he turned to Umpire Red Jones and said, "Hell, I might just as well go back to the hotel. I'm not having any fun."

Cubs Clout Hatten, Beat Dodgers, 6 to 3

Brooklyn, Aug. 27 (AP).—They had to snap a jinx to do it, but the Chicago Cubs made it four straight over the National League-leading Brooklyn Dodgers today by overcoming their antipathy to Lefty Joe Hatten's slants and beating him on his home acreage, 6 to 3.

Hatten previously held eight straight decisions over the Cubs, who beat the Brooks three straight at Chicago last month.

Today the Cubs went to work quickly on the Brooklyn southpaw, with Catcher Bob Scheffing slamming a home run into the left-field seats with two aboard in the first inning.

The Dodgers got two runs back in the third and fourth, one of them Cookie Lavagetto's second home run of the season, but the Cubs put on another three-run splurge in the sixth to ice the contest.

Bob Sturgeon got two bases when Pete Reiser tried to shoestring his liner to left. Then with two out, Peanuts Lowry and Eddie Waitkus walked to fill the bases. Andy Papko was safe when a force play at second fizzled, scoring Sturgeon. Phil Cavaretta then drove in two more with a single to right center. That was the end of Hatten.

Meanwhile Johnny Schmitz was being touched freely but not dangerously, yielding 12 blows in achieving his ninth win of the year against 16 losses. Rookie Second Sacker Eddie Miksis of Brooklyn reached him for three singles. It was Hatten's eighth loss against 12 wins.

Bluege Is Home To Talk Things Over With Griff

Manager Ossie Bluege of the Nats is in Washington today for a conference with Owner Clark Griffith, after taking temporary leave of the team which is New York-bound from Chicago.

Griffith attached no significance to the home-coming of Bluege, who recently scotched reports of a player rebellion and took a punch at a Washington baseball writer.

"The team has an open date before playing the Yankees in New York on Friday," said Griffith. "I didn't order Bluege to Washington. He advised me he would spend the day here and I guess we'll just talk over the situation in general."

Stirnweiss' Homer in 10th Wins for Yanks

St. Louis, Aug. 27 (AP).—George "Snuffy" Stirnweiss, New York Yankee second baseman, started it and finished it this afternoon as the Yanks edged the tail-end St. Louis Brown in 10 innings, 7-6.

Stirnweiss hit the first pitch of the game for a home run in the first inning, and clouted another to the same left field bleachers to break a 6-all tie in the tenth. Reliefer Nelson Potter was the tenth-inning Stirnweiss victim.

Chesapeake Shad Sought in Maine

The Fish and Wildlife Service is trying to determine whether Maine fishermen are catching Virginia and Maryland shad.

Two service agents, Edgar Hollis and Luella Cable, left Tuesday to spend about three weeks tagging shad caught off the Maine coast. L. A. Walford, chief of Marine Fisheries, said the two will accompany fishermen and attempt to tag between 500 and 1000 fish.

Walford said it is a mystery where shad go after spawning. The tagging in Maine, he explained, may disclose whether Virginia and Maryland shad go that far north.

Shad are caught in Virginia and Maryland in April and May, and later, if they are the same shad, the Maine fishermen get a whack at them.

A half century ago the catch in Chesapeake Bay was about 17 million pounds. Now the yearly catch is only four million.

The shad population can be rebuilt, Walford said, through control of the yearly catch and by alleviating stream pollution.

Joe Louis Scores Golf Knockout

Philadelphia, Aug. 27 (U.P.).—Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis won his first round match in the Negro United Golfers Association national open today, defeating Joe Terry of Philadelphia, 6 and 5, at the Robbs Creek course.

Louis, who led amateur qualifiers with a 74, lost only one hole in the round, winning eight and halving three.

Bell's Excuse Weak—Ingram

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—Jonas H. Ingram, commissioner of the All-America Football Conference, today termed the excuse of the National Football League for not accepting the challenge of the All-America to a post-season game "a weak one," and intimated the National League could play the game if it so desired.

"While we have no desire to use the press to prolong the discussion of our challenge to the National Professional Football League," Ingram said, "we do feel that the excuse given by Commissioner Bert Bell for declining was, at best, a weak one.

"After all, their rule against post-season games is a comparatively new one, and it could easily be modified to take care of anything as important as a world championship game, with some worthy national charity to reap the benefits.

"Just in the past few days we made a very important change in our rules by means of a telephone vote of the membership. Announcement of the change will be made within a few days. The National Football League could do the same thig if they felt that their champion could defeat our champion in a World Series game."

Bell, in declining the challenge, had said that the National League's constitution prohibited the playing of post-season games.

3-Horse Race To Miss Grillo

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 27 (AP).—They held a private South American party in the ninth Diana Handicap here today, only three horses from the Argentine accepting the issue. Mrs. Barclay K. Dougles' Miss Grillo and Dmitri Djordjadze's Rosa Blanca ran as an entry trained by Horatio Luro, with the former scoring by two lengths at odds of 1 to 5.

The Greentree Stable's Humaya split the Luro pair, finishing second by a half dozen lengths over Rosa Blanca, which also was entered in tomorrow's seventh race.

Bee Ann Mac and Florencia were scratched from the mile and a furlong stakes for fillies and mares, making it a simple task for Miss Grillo to record her second straight victory in the event. Last year, the chestnut mare won in 1:50 1/5—one fifth of a second slower than the track record—and today, under 126 pounds, she was clocked 1:50 2/5. Conn McCreary, who guided the winner home in 1946, again was in the saddle.

Rickey at Newport News

Newport News, Va., Aug. 27 (AP). Branch Rickey, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, comes here Friday for a meeting with the recently organized Peninsula Athletic Association to discuss plans for a new baseball park next season.

There have been rumors that Brooklyn was considering withdrawing its Piedmont League franchise from Newport News because of inadequate facilities.

Bub Worsham Qualifies, 157

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 27 (AP).—Three Ohio youngsters paced a field of almost 100 through the 36-hole qualifying round of the second annual National Caddy golf championship today at the Ohio State Univedsity course, each carding a 151 total, 7 over par.

Deadlocked for the medal laurels were Dow Finsterwald of Athens, red-haired son of western conference official Russ Finsterwald; Darral Reed of Indian Hill, near Cincinnati, who set a new record for the event with a 2-under-par 70 on the second round after opening with an 80, and Tony Ondrus of Akron, who pinned together rounds of 76 and 75.

The co-medalists had a two-stroke edge over their nearest foe, George Allmon of Kansas City breezing in with 78-75—153, while next in line with 154 on rounds of 73-81 was Roger Dunn, bashful boy from Los Angeles who was sent to the tourney by Comedian Bob Hope and Crooner Bing Crosby.

The 64 qualifiers will open match play tomorrow with a single 18-hole round. Two rounds are booked both Friday and Saturday, with the finals going 36 holes Sunday. The winner takes down the President Truman trophy, which is at least a yard high, plus a four-year college scholarship. The losing finalist gets a two-year scholarship at Ohio State University, and there's almost a carload of golfing merchandise to be sprayed around the other contestants.

Worsham Plays Manley Today

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 27 (AP). Marvin (Bubby) Worsham of Washington, D. C., younger brother of National Open Champion Lew Worsham, shot a 36-hole score of 80, 77—157 to easily qualify for the National Caddy championship here today.

Worsham will meet Robert Manley, Cincinnati, Ohio, in the first round of match play tomorrow. Stanley Mouser of Friendship Heights, Md., also qualified for the championship flight and will face George Allmon of Kansas City, Mo.

New England's Tops

Rockingham Double Pays $1086 for $2

Salem, N. H., Aug. 27 (AP).—The highest daily double of the 1947 New England racing season was recorded at Rockingham Park today before a $12,151 crowd as two lightly regarded winners combined to pay off $1086.40 on a $2 ticket.

Thirty-seven winning tickets were held on H. B. Hershen's Westwood Belle (23-1) in the first race, and Fantasy Farm's Nuclear (11-1) in the second.

A consolation double of $34 was paid when Mrs. C. Vandenberge's Poker Face was scratched out of the second race.

In the $5000 Lincoln Purse for 2-year-olds, Irving Gushen's 4-5 favorite, Andy's Glory, lost the lead when he swung wide on the turn, but came ahead again in the stretch to pull away from the challenging Bill Howk, the Omer S. Deming entry. A. Ryan's Caste Mark was third, and J. Gavegane's Directoire was fourth.

Under an impost of 122 pounds, 11 pounds more than an yother entry, Andy's Glory sprinted the six furlongs in 1:12.3

A. Catalde's Daring Mate stumbled on the backstretch, injuring a leg, and threw its rider, George Hettinger.

Andy's Glory paid $3.80, $2.40 and $2.20. Bill Howk returned $3 for place and $3 for show. Caste Marke paid $3.40 for show.

Soviet Winning 1948's Olympics With Test Tubes

London, Aug. 27 (AP).—Next year's Olympic Games are being won—Russia hopes—in the scientific laboratories of the Soviet Union.

"Back room boys" with microscopes and test tubes, Tass reported tonight, are working as hard as cheerleaders to get Soviet athletes in top form.

Tass said special attention is being given to "the limit of oxygen consumption by man," the subject of a forthcoming report by Researcher Vladimir Farfel to the All-Union Congress of Physiologists.

"This year 20 participants of the marathon race covered 26 miles in less than three hours without the least sign of fatigue or exhaustion," Farfel said in an interview quoted by Tass.

"This was due," he added, "not only to proper selection of runners but to their rational training and diet, based on studies of the Moscow Physical Culture Research Institute."

Wright Hits Into Double Play in 9th

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 27.—The Nats saddled a winner on getaway day at Comiskey Park this afternoon, outrunning the Chisox again, 6 to 5, and making a clean sweep of the abbreviated two-game series.

The victory wasn't made fast, however, until Mickey Haefner, the third Nat moundsman, came to the rescue of the sagging Milo Candini and got Taft Wright to hit into a game-ending double play with the tying and winning runs on the bases.

Candini had relieved Sid Hudson in the third inning and pitched creditably until the Sox got fresh in the last half of the ninth.

He got Pinch-Hitter Jack Wallaesa, but singles by Kolloway and Hodgin sounded the alarm in the Nat bullpen and Haefner rushed in to stem the Sox. Wright hit the first pitch and the two hour and 17 minute fray was over as Johnny Sullivan and Mickey Vernon combined to make a pip of a double play.

Lee Doesn't Last Long

The Nats plastered three Sox hurlers for a dozen safeties with Vernon's double and two singles showing the way. The Sox got nine hits off Starter Hudson and Candini, but wildness on the part of Hudson set up three of their runs.

Chicago's 39-year-old lefthander, Thornton Lee, didn't last long enough to meet the nine Nat starters. He was ushered out in two thirds of an inning after pitching four-run, five-hit ball.

Lee got Sullivan on a grounder, but Buddy Lewis, Tom McBride and Mickey Vernon singled, Lewis scoring. Stan Spence popped, but Gerry Priddy doubled to center, McBride and Vernon scoring.

Eddie Yost lined a two baser into center, bringing Priddy in and sending Lee out. Righthander Earl Harrist relieved and disposed of Frank Mancuso to end that Nat splurge.

Hudson couldn't find the plate in Chicago's first. Kolloway greeted him with a single. Hodgin, Wright and York walked to force in run No. 1.

Double Play The Long Way

After Philley fouled out, Appling hit into an unusual double play which produced Chicago's second score. Sullivan dropped Appling's pop in short left field. He recovered, however, in time to force York at second.

Hodgin broke for home and slid under Priddy's throw, but the Nats got Hudson out of the hole when Mancuso threw to Yost in time to nail Taft Wright who belatedly decided to make third.

Hudson got by the second inning undamaged, but it was apparent he didn't have it and finally yielded to Candini in the third after Hodgin singled and Wright walked.

York welcomed Candini with a single to score Hodgin and Philley's fly to right brought in another Sox score to make it a tie game.

But it didn't stay that way long. Yost drilled his second straight double into center. He was home on the next pitch as Mancuso grounded to Appling and Appling elected to try for Yost at third. His throw went into the Chicago dugout and Yost just walked in from third.

Yost was the fair-haired boy in the Nat sixth, scoring the run that turned out to be the winner. He walked, moved up a peg on Mancuso's single and came home on Sullivan's single after Candini had hit into a double play.

The Nats enjoy an off day tomorrow, but open a four-game set against the Yanks in the Stadium Friday night . . . Early Wynn will shoot for his 14th victory with Bobo Newsom, who needs no introduction, as the likely opponent . . . A single game Saturday and a twin bill Sunday wind up the New York invasion . . .

Perry's $1,000,000 Offer For Brownies Rejected

Chicago, Aug. 27 (U.P.).—Emory C. Perry, a Chicago engineer, revealed today an offer of one million dollars for the controlling interest in the St. Louis Browns was rejected by Richard C. Muckerman, but that a deal for the Browns or for another major league baseball team might be made later.

He indicated in a 1000-word statement that whatever team his group purchased, the deal probably would be closed only if the club can be moved to the West Coast with the permission of major league baseball owners.

"It is true that we have considered other major league ball clubs," his statement said, "and it may be true that we are seriously considering another league ball club in place of the St. Louis Browns.

Coast Meeting Involved

"The meeting on the coast this week will have some bearing on what we might decide to do."

The executive council of Major League baseball, composed of Commissioner Chandler, American League President Will Harridge, National League President Ford Frick, Frank McKenney, Pittsburgh Pirates, and Leslie O'Conner of the Chicago White Sox, went to the coast for conferences later this week.

Their meeting resulted from the appeal of the Pacific Coast League to become a third major circuit, and they agreed to inspect coast league property and discuss the application on the scene.

It seemed apparent that if the executive council should decide the Pacific Coast League deserved a higher classification, they would not approve transfer of a present big league franchise to the coast.

Further, they would not be likely to approve such a transfer if the Pacific Coast League objected to "invasion" by a big league team.

Perry's statement arrived by mail with an accompanying letter which said "I have made no statements on this subject heretofore. We have refrained from commenting and will not comment until we are ready to do so.

"We did write Mr. J. V. Dunbar, attorney for Mr. Muckerman, asking him if Mr. Muckerman would consider selling his 160,000 shares of stock for one million dollars cash," the statement said. "Mr. Dunbar gave me the information I wanted. The price Mr. Dunbar had originally told me the St. Louis Browns could be purchased for was considerably more than our appraisal warranted.

Price Unknown

"We still do not know at what price Mr. Muckerman will sell his stock . . . and if we decide to make an offer to Mr. Muckerman we will do so with earnest money."

Diesel Engine Here to Stay, Moves Haight the Hard Way

Climbs Pike's Peak With Hog on Cog

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

IT'S A WONDER I didn't become a great man while vacationing in Colorado.

At least the No. 1 wrong guy in the State's history is the most honored. In 1806 Lieut. Zebulon Montgomery Pike stood on the summit of nearby Cheyenne Mountain, pointed to a giant peak and remarked, "Yon mountain never will be climbed by mortal man."

That statement, probably originating the term "piker," made the Army officer eligible as a handicapper, fight expert and weatherman.

Lieutenant Pike simply didn't reckon with fellows like Dr. James and Walter Haight.

The good and hardy Doctor make Pike a liar by reaching the summit in 1820. He beat me to the top by only 127 years. I made it early last week.

Of course, I had a little more help than Dr. James. Whereas his equipment probably consisted of ropes, picks, spikes and wedges, all I carried along was a hearty breakfast and a determination to retain it.

Just how wrong a fellow like Pike can be is proved by the fact that between the successful ascensions of Dr. James and Haight, hundreds of thousands have made the up grade. In fact, if they had all tried to remain aloft, the peak would have looked like a gigantic bee hive.

Ironically, if you ask a Coloradoan the identity of Dr. James he probably will scratch his head and say, "Don't know him. Perhaps he was the white sheep of the James Boys."

The name "Pike's Peak" was already attached firmly to the big hunk of rocks when an effort was made to call it "James' Peak." The public would have none of it, proving perhaps it pays to be ignorant.

There is a variety of ways of getting to the top of the 14,120-foot heap—by auto, on foot, on burro, on the cog railroad and on a bicycle.

After my adventures of the previous day with personalized mountain driving, I eliminated my car. Walking and bicycling was out for obvious reasons and the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals would have had me jailed if I made as much as gesture toward a burro.

Spurred on by advertisements that the cog railroad hadn't had a serious accident since it began in 1891 and the fact that new Diesel engnies had been installed, I decided to take the railway.

Four one-car trains made the trip twice daily. I reported early to make sure I got a seat. The station was jammed with eager mountain climbers.

I was trying to appear nonchalant and inconspicuous but a small boy brought attention with, "Look at that fat man, father. Is he going up the mountain with us?"

His dad looked me over, took his boy by the hand and moved back saying, "No, son. We're taking the next train."

A slim matron asked the station man how close the trains ran together. Informed they started 10 minutes apart, she eyed me and said to her companion, "You know Jane, I was just thinking

Richmond, Va., Aug. 27 (AP).—Richard M. and Jack Hamilton, of Newport News, possessed the father-son golf tournament championship for another year today.

7-2 Margin In Finale Saves Day

Detroit, Aug. 27 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox hung on to second place by splitting their second straight double header with the Detroit Tigers today, winning the nightcap, 5 to 4, after dropping the opener, 7 to 2.

Former Tiger Birdie Tebbetts, with two hits in each game, kept Detroit from moving ahead of Boston by personally accounting for three Red Sox runs in the nightcap.

With Detroit leading 3-0 Tebbetts singled in the fourth inning of the second game to knock in two runs and another scored when the ball skipped through Vic Wertz and rolled to the wall.

Out Fishing...

By Jack Bell

YAKIMA, Wash., Aug. 27.—Since August 9 in company with nine other Eastern and Midwestern fishing writers, we have been speeding through the States of North Dakota, Montana, the provinces of Alberta and British Columbia; Idaho and Washington in search of trout and salmon fishing spots mixed with a lot of new scenery.

Those out for a trout or a salmon holiday usually head for the North country in eastern United States. They have a surprise in store for them here in the Northwest. We have found it.

As guests of the citizens of Sandpoint, Idaho, we fished lake Pend D'Oreille, famed for its giant kamloops rainbow trout.

Fishing with Laurin Pietsch, one of the original planters of the now giant trout in the lake, we hooked and landed several landlocked sockeye salmon and cutthroat trout but did not have the luck to hook into a kamloops.

It was so with all the other fishing writers. Don Gilles, Detroit (Mich.) Times, after hanging on to a rod and trolling deep, Grew tired and turned his rod over to Lee Woodruff, sports editor Grand Rapids (Mich.) Press.

It was Don's bad day. Not more than five minutes after he turned his rod over to Woodruff, Lee got a terrific strike.

EXCITEMENT struck the deck, and lasted long after the boat skipper sunk the gaff into Lee's huge kamloops trout. The fish weighed 22 pounds and measured 36 inches long, with a girth of 28 inches. Lee's kamloops was the only one caught from the lake. About 40 fishermen including Bing Crosby, were out on the lake trolling.

We made a leisurely trip from Spokane to Yakima, fishing several small lakes and the Yakima River along the route. Everywhere we went, either ranbow, eastern brook or sockeye salmon were hooked.

We continue by motor towards Seattle, fishing for trout in streams along the route, ending our tour there only to begin salmon fishing in earnest along the Pacific Coast.

Our Haight Hits His Peak

perhaps we should take the afternoon trip."

It was on occasions like this that I was sorry our doctor blew out my ears before the trip thus eliminating a slight deafness.

Anyway, I heard a bobby-soxer whisper to her friend, "Take a gander at the heavy egg over there and prove to yourself it is possible to move the mountain to Mohammed."

When the first car was ready and backed into the station, I expected a rush for seats. However, I had the doorway to myself and a choice of position. Somebody wisecracked, "All right, who wants to take a chance?"

The car finally filled with a lot of people wearing thick glasses and it wasn't long until we were in motion. The engine strained and grunted as we climbed slowly and when I noted the engineer frowning I began a forward hunching movement that seemed to help.

When we reached the timber line and the steepest grade I became a stanch admirer of Mr. Diesel, for his engine didn't falter. I felt like giving a Bronx cheer to my fellow travelers, but banished the thought of wasting the energy when the conductor asked, "Hasn't the altitude got you yet?"

I had heard that thin air was hard on thick people and I'll confess that I didn't make any quick moves. For some unexplained reason, fainting once was stock equipment on the peak. An old-timer told me that years ago he had seen as many as 20 women collapse on a single trip.

"Perhaps it was fashionable then. Now we have more traffic and a faint a week is about average," he said.

I saw a lot of things on the summit I had anticipated, but I hardly expected to find a Western Union office. In my time I have met a lot of telegraph operators who get high, but here was a guy higher than 10 kites—14,120 feet to be exact.

I was having my private laugh when a woman approached and asked, "Are you going down by railroad or auto?"

I didn't want to be impolite, so I turned away. Later I decided to take a chance on one of the big limousines. As I settled back in the seat, I saw the woman smiling and nodding from the window of the train.

My auto companions were not talkative, but I could have sworn as we descended I heard somebody up front say, "Beef is coming down."

Of course, it could have been a Texas cattleman.

Andy Wipes Out Earl's 2-Hole Lead

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

Andy Oliveri downed defending champion Earl Marcey, 2 and 1, to win his third D. C. Public Links golf championship yesterday on the East Potomac golf course.

The victory gave Oliveri permanent possession of the S. G. Loeffler Trophy. He had previously won the tournament in 1938 and 1939. Marcey had taken top honors in 1942 and 1946 and a victory yesterday would have given him the cup for keeps.

Marcey held a two-up lead at the end of eleven holes, but his putter failed him badly at that point and although Oliveri was having putting troubles himself, he managed to best Marcey's efforts.

The finalists were all even at the turn, although Oliveri had a 40 and Marcey a 42. Marcey won the tenth and eleventh, then took 6's on the twelfth and thirteenth while Oliveri carded 5's to even the match again.

They halved the fourteenth with bogey fives and Oliveri won the fifteenth with a par 3.

Marcey kept his chances alive on the sixteenth with a half, but took a 6 on the seventeenth which lost him the hole and the match as Oliveri posted a bogey 5.

Marcey and Oliveri agreed after the match that it was the poorest golf both had played in a long time. Marcey remarked that he blew a 10-inch putt and a 2-footer and smiled ruefully as he added, "Andy and I are old pals and I don't mind losing to him, but I wish we could have given a better exhibition in the finals."

The Cards:

Thompson Hurls On Grays Bill

Frank Thompson, talented southpaw pitcher of Washington's Homestead Grays, may be called upon to extend his record to eight consecutive victories at Griffith Stadium tonight when the champion Newark Eagles are entertained in a Negro National League game at 6:30 o'clock.

In the 8:30 o'clock end of the twi-night bargain bill that has been advanced from last night through special arrangement the Grays are to play host to the popular Indianapolis Clowns.

Prominent among the Eagles claiming the spotlight tonight will be Monty Irwin, 1946 league batting leader and originally an outfielder, who has replaced the Cleveland Indians' Larry Doby at second base. Irwin, one of the hardest hitting and best rounded players in the circuit, is being trailed by major league scouts.

Mrs. Howard Wins Rule Golf Trophy

Mrs. Rex J. Howard won the 36-hole medal play handicap for the Edward J. Rule Trophy yesterday at the Kenwood Country Club.

Mrs. Howard's 88-88—176 minus a 10 handicap for a 166 was three strokes better than Mrs. A. J. Howard's 103-104—207 minus 38 handicap total of 169.

Third low net prize went to Mrs. Pearson Mencher, who shot 94-96—190 with an 18 handicap for a 172. Low gross honors were taken by Mrs. Richard Kreuzburg with 90-91—181.

Softball Teams Play Twin Bill

Four crack softball teams will meet in Griffith Stadium Saturday night in a benefit doubleheader starting at 8.

In the opener Mount Rainier will meet Frame Refrigeration of Baltimore, and in the 9:15 nightcap Garvin's Grill will face Thrifty Beverages.

Proceeds of the twin bill will be used to finance the city-wide champion in regional and national softball play.

Raba Seen Likely Hoya Quarterback On Form in Drills

Elmer Raba, Gonzaga prep graduate, probably will quarterback Georgetown's T-formation football squad this season, Coach Jack Hagerty indicated yesterday.

Raba, who showed flashes of brilliance last year before a knee injury sidelined him, has impressed Hagerty with his speed and agility in pre-season workouts.

Another promising back is Lou Surman, rated ninth among the Nation's booters last year. Much of the credit for the Hoyas' five victories last season has been attributed to his punting.

Linesmen Buz Werder, Elmer Oberto and Jim O'Keefe head the list of promising regulars in the forward wall. Werder was named to both the All-District and All-Catholic squads last year and received honorable mention in the Associated Press All-America.

Ends on hand are George Benigni, Larry Koncelik, Al Sarashevitz, Frank Desmond and Bill Dzugan.

Merrick Club Holds Football Meetings

The Merrick Boys Club is holding two organization meetings at the clubhouse this week for the coming football season.

Tonight at 7, all boys trying out for the 120 and 140-pound teams will meet. On Tuesday night at 7:30 all boys trying out for the 160-pound and unlimited teams will meet.

Devitt Opens 1947 Drills

Devitt Prep will begin football practice Tuesday at 11 a. m., Head Coach Len Askin announced yesterday.

Although the team will be without the services of three star linemen—Sid Maites, Bill Thrift and Ray Krouse—Askin has several star backs returning.

Bill Doffort, Dick Daly, Dave Daly and Jimmy Lea are expected to provide backfield speed this season. Doffort and Dick Daly are rated two of the fastest backs in the area.

Askin intends to install the double wing back formation this season to take full advantage of his group of sprinters.

The schedule follows:

September 19, at Falls Church; 26, at Mount Vernon.
October 4, at Staunton; 11, at Montgomery Junior College; 18, Woodward Prep; 25, at W.-L. High; 31, at Allentown High.
November 8, Veterans Institute of Baltimore; 15, at Mercersburg.

Logan Playground Wins Tennis Crown

Logan Playground captured the Recreation Department tennis championship yesterday by scoring 31½ points, 8½ points better than its nearest rival, Banneker.

In third position with 20 points was Langston. Randall was fourth with 11; Kelly Miller, fifth with 5½, and Bundy, last with 1 point.

Edwards Cuts Skins' Drills To One a Day

Los Angeles, Calif., Aug. 27.—Coach Turk Edwards, convinced that his Washington Redskins are rapidly rounding into top form for their big game with the Los Angeles Rams at Memorial Coliseum September 5, has cut practice sessions down to one per day.

"We don't wan't to leave our game on the practice field," said the Redskins' mentor, "and we can't afford further serious injuries."

Whether Al Couppee, rugged fullback, and Harry Adelman, rookie end, will be able to play in the squad's East vs. West game at Santa Ana Friday night remained to be seen. Couppee has a pulled shoulder muscle and Adelman a severe bruise on his left leg.

Bob DeFruiter, speedy halfback, and Sal Rosato and Jack Jenkins, fullbacks, will be in good shape for the Santa Ana tussle. Leo Nobile, promising rookie guard, whose left hand has been in a cast for almost two weeks, will be able to play Friday night.

Others among the casualties who should suit up for the big squad game include John Lookabaugh and Jim Peebles, ends, and Tommy Mont, quarterback, who suffered an elbow injury while training with the Chicago All-Stars.

Ohio Girl Beats Aunt In $5000 Long Swim

Toronto, Aug. 27 (AP).—Twenty-year-old Berneice Looney of Warren, Ohio, late today won the $5000 5-mile Canadian national exhibition swimming championship in record time when she covered the distance in 2 hours 27 minutes 7 seconds.

Miss Looney broke the mark of 2:28.9 set by her aunt, May Looney, in 1934.

Although her niece took the top prize of $2500 besides breaking her record, May Looney gained consolation by finishing third in 2:44.20 and earning $600. Second place went to Mrs. Winnie Roach of Toronto, mother of a 2-months-old daughter, Mrs. Roach was timed in 2:40.35 4/5. Her husband and daughter greeted her as she stepped out of the water to receive a check for $1000.

Md. U. Groups Special Classes In New College

The University of Maryland announced yesterday the grouping of its off-campus courses, night classes and academic extension work under a new "college of special and continuation studies."

Dr. George J. Kabat returns to the university to head the new school after 18 months with the United States Office of Education and four years in the Army with the combat engineers and the Office of Strategic Services.

One of the aims of the new division is development of a program for Maryland's elementary and high school teachers enabling them to earn credits throughout the year instead of waiting for summer school.

The announcement said the school will be a general clearing house for all off-campus academic work, including the extensive program of evening classes in Baltimore.

"Our chief purpose," said Dr. Kabat, "is to render the greatest educational service possible to all the people of Maryland."

Another of the projects assigned the new college is development of educational units at military installations in Maryland. Some 300 officers and men among Second Army personnel at Fort Meade already have signed up for college-level studies on the post. Classes have been requested at the Naval Research Laboratories, the Naval Ordnance Laboratories, the Army Map Service, and other installations around Washington.

The new college plans to offer an extensive catalog of courses in English, history, psychology, government and politics, sociology, speech, geography, physics, math, and industrial subjects, all supervised by instructors from the various departments of the university.

Credits awarded by the college will be applicable toward degrees from the university.

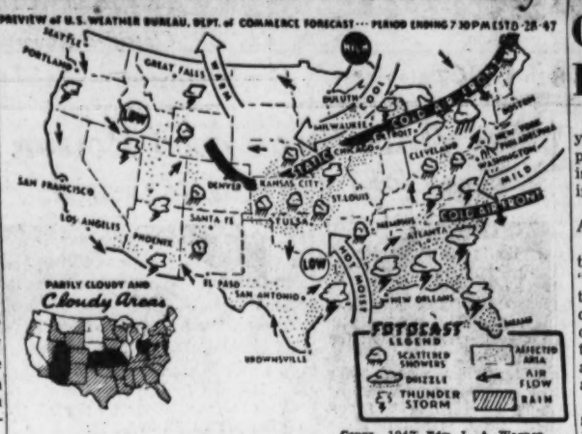
Before he went into the Army, Dr. Kabat was an instructor in the College of Education and direction the war production training program.

States Join to Hire Freight Rate Analyst

Richmond, Va., Aug. 27 (AP).—William C. Seibert, commerce counsel for the State Corporation Commission, said today Virginia planned to join other States in employing a cost analyst to study a railroad request filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission for general increases in freight rates.

This, he said, would eliminate the necessity of Virginia's employing its own analyst. The carriers' petition to the ICC asks general increases up to 25 per cent and in addition requests upward revision in "less than carload" rates in official territory.

National Weather Summary



Copyr., 1947, Edw. L. A. Wagner

24-HOUR FORECAST—Forecasters are calling for partly cloudy skies and scattered thunderstorms in the eastern third of the United States today. (See fotocast and inset map.) Moist air off the Atlantic is controlling weather from Maine to Virginia and as far inland as the Ohio Valley. This visiting air flow is causing the welcome relief from the recent muggy weather and record-breaking temperatures in the Northeast.

Highest temperatures this afternoon will be in the 80s from New England to the Carolinas, from the Ohio Valley to Missouri and Texas, the Northwest and the Rockies. Afternoon readings will be in the 90s in the Gulf States as warm, moist air from the Gulf flows inland, rises into tall clouds and releases thunderstorms. Scattered thundershowers are also indicated near the fronts in the Southeast and from Michigan to the Central Plains. Some storms are also expected in widely scattered sections of the Rockies.

Weather-wise readers will notice temperatures are cooler in the Central Plains and the Corn Belt and air flow arrows over this large area point in several directions. During the extended hot, dry spell of seven weeks beginning July 4, a warm southerly air flow doggedly persisted. Showers from the Central Plains to Michigan will bring some increase in corn yield over scattered areas.

Fronts and the accompanying storm or affected areas move in the direction indicated by arrows attached to the fronts. Weather over the Nation changes as air flows from high pressure centers toward fronts and low cells.

The scientists tell us these stormy low cells move eastward because of rotation of the earth. For this reason storms move from west to east across the fotocast.

Today's maximum temperature forecasts include Atlanta, 90; St. Louis, 89; Kansas City, 88; Chicago, 85; Milwaukee, 84; Detroit, 82; New York, Boston and Hartford, 80.

Bay State Official Asks Report on Trawler Deal

Boston, Aug. 27 (AP).—Reports that the Federal Government contemplated purchase of about 50 Massachusetts fishing trawlers for use in feeding Germany today drew from Lieut. Gov. Arthur W. Coolidge a demand from the War Department for a "full report" on the plan.

Coolidge wired Secretary of the War Royall that such a project would cut Boston production "about 75 per cent and cause a serious shortage of seafoods."

War Trophies Group to Give Danger Tests

Maybe you've got a war trophy you found in Normandy or on Saipan, a shell or a foreign gun, that is worrying the little woman even if it doesn't bother you.

Maybe she thinks it might go off. And possibly she's right.

To avert such a possibility, and to help veterans understand the "potential" 'of their war souvenirs, the "Know Your War Trophies" committee met yesterday at the officer of Lieut. W. R. Brooks of the Navy Ordnance Disposal Unit at Indianhead, Md. The committee announced the following:

After October 1, explosive-type souvenirs may be turned over to Police Sergt. Sheldon R. McKee at the Police Department range adjacent to police headquarters. McKee will see that such trophies are examined, and, if necessary, deactivated. All souvenirs will be returned to their owners.

"Gangster-type" souvenirs—full automatic weapons such a machine guns—must be registered as prescribed by the National Firearms Act. To do so, contact F. J. Sweeney, representative on the committee of the Alcohol Tax Unit of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Sweeney's phone is LIstrict 5050, extension 2761. Weapons may be brought to room 2003, temporary building S, 6th st. and Jefferson dr. sw., between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.

And finally, if you have a non-explosive souvenir, such as a rifle or a pistol, you can find out just about anything you want to know about it by calling H. W. Proctor, National Rifle Association representative on the committee, on REpublic 5221.

Junior College Gets Building, Furnishings From War Surplu

When students of Montgomery Junior College return to school September 15 it will be a surplus wartime building furnished with discards from the Army, the Navy and the OPA.

For the students, though, the structure which saw service at Fort Washington, Md., will be the beginning of a campus. Last year all classes and school activities were held in the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School.

The surplus building now being rebuilt for the college in Bethesda will provide 10,000 square feet of space and will house a student union room, a bookstore, administration and faculty offices in addition to biology and chemistry laboratories and a science lecture room. Other classes will continue in the high school.

The Federal Works Agency, which is providing the building, also is equipping it with surplus furniture from the Navy Department, the Pentgon, the Glenn Martin plant in Baltimore and the OPA.

Included in the expanded curriculum of the college this year will be eight vacational courses. They are art, drafting, general business management, education, medical secretarial, medical technologist, music and secretarial. In the general education field, the college offers work in English, history, political science and sociology.

Hungary Rejects U. S. Vote Protest

Budapest, Hungary, Aug. 27 (U.P.).—Foreign Office spokesman Ivan Boldizsar today rejected American Legation protests against disfranchised voters in the Hungarian election as a "generalization of ill will."

A spokesman for the opposition Independence Party charged that intimidation was continuing, with one party meeting prohibited today and another forced to move into a small hall.

Boldizsar said there had been no arrests during the campaign and that election preparations had been "orderly and peaceful."

The campaign ends tomorrow night. It will be followed by a three-day "period of silence" before voters go to the polls Sunday.

Barrett Gets Clegg Case Report but Its Secret

Police Chief Says Findings on Beating Charge Will Be Given Commission Today

Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett yesterday received a report on an investigation of charges made by Julius Willie Clegg, 26, that he was beaten by police.

But Barrett declined to reveal any part of findings made by Chief of Detectives Floyd A. Truscott.

The report will be given to the District Commissioners today, Barrett said, with recommendations. Barrett declined to disclose his recommendations.

Barrett said he would "absolutely not" suspend the detectives identified by Clegg as his assailants. He declined also to reveal their names.

Barrett declared also he would take with him to the District Commissioners a letter sent by Attorney Charles E. Ford "on behalf of the officers alleged to be involved" in the beating. Ford asked for grand jury action.

Jerry Kluttz is on a week's vacation. His Federal Diary column will resume next Tuesday.

Attorney Roger Robb, representing Clegg, a Negro war veteran and employe of The Washington Post, reiterated to United States Attorney George Morris Fay Tuesday his request made two weeks ago that grand jury action be taken.

Barrett said he had not yet talked to Fay about presenting the evidence to a grand jury.

Mother Admits Nearly Killing Baby After Spat With Spouse

A young mother who attempted to carry out a threat to kill her baby rather than have him taken away from her was held on $10,000 bond yesterday.

Mrs. Henrietta Fay Curry, 23, of 1286 Morse st. ne. told police she attempted to choke her 7-month-old son to death Tuesday night after what she described as her husband's threat to "leave me and take Dickie with him."

Arraigned before Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson on a charge of assault with intent to kill, Mrs. Curry was sent to Gallinger Hospital for treatment and examination pending further hearing September 3.

The child, Richard Curry, was reported in good condition at Gallinger Hospital after being revived by his uncle.

The mother, near hysterics, tearfully told police her husband "said he was going to leave me and take the baby with him. I said I'd sooner kill Dickie than let him have him. Then he left."

Mrs. Curry told police:

"I sat there and kept thinking and waiting for Dickie to go to sleep. I made up my mind that if I couldn't have him, no one would. I reached over and started to choke him.

"Then I looked at his face and saw what he looked like. I screamed and let him go."

According to the child's uncle, 16-year-old Gene Curry, the baby was blue and unconscious when he ran into the room. He gave artificial respiration while the mother telephoned police.

"There should be no room for stubbornness and wilfulness in the home if children are to be protected," Judge Neilson declared.

Thomas Ahearn, Mrs. Curry's attorney, and Assistant United States Attorney John B. Diamond agreed she had been under mental strain "because of domestic difficulties" and urged examination and possible treatment pending the hearing Wednesday.

Sex Law Gets Praise, Club Use Doesn't

Man Who Battered Suspect in Woods Held in $1000 Bond On Assault Charge

While one official crusaer for stronger laws against sexual perverts was being congratulated yesterday, and unofficial and self-appointed guardian of morality was sharply rebuked.

United States Attorney George Morris Fay received a verbal pat on the back from Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West for developing a new statute providing heavy penalties for sex offenses and medical treatment for sex psychopaths.

But Hope Julius Colvin, 29-year-old carpenter who attacked the problem differently—he battered a man he suspected of being abnormal with a club—was held in $1000 bond for the grand jury on an assault charge.

Colvin launched his crusade in a wooded section near the 5800 block of Georgia ave. nw. His counsel offered as evidence a batch of magazine articles the defendant had read for illumination on perversion.

Fay, whose objective is strictly legal, has won thumping plaudits for proposing a new three-dged law that would:

Establish heavy penalties for persons guilty of sex offenses.

Aim even heavier penalties at those guilty of sex offenses involving children.

Set up legal procedure for committing dangerous sex psychopaths to St. Elizabeths Hospital for medical treatment until fit to return to society.

Health, police and prison officials have indorsed the proposal, which Fay hopes to have prepared for Congressional action early next year.

2 Bus Lines File to End Joint Fares

Arnold and AB&W Again Appeal to ICC on Agreement With Capital Transit

Two Virginia bus lines yesterday petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission anew to end their "joint fares" agreement with Capital Transit Company for District-Arlington County commuters.

The Washington, Virginia and Maryland Coach Co. (Arnold Lines) and the Alexandria, Barcroft and Washington Transit Co., asked discontinuation of the special rates as "discriminating to other patrons" and as "a disastrous basis of revenue."

Yesterday's petitions disclosed that Capital Transit Company has served "demand" on the two Virginia bus companies for the major share of fares collected from commuters between District points and military installations in Arlington County.

Under the original, war-born agreement, books of 12 rides between District points and the Pentagon, Navy Annex and other installations in Arlington County sold for $1.60, or 13 1-3 cents a trip. By agreement, this was divided 5.83 cents to CTC and 7.5 cents to the Virginia line involved.

However, the petitions revealed, on June 17 CTC notified the two bus companies that beginning June 22 it would demand 10 cents as its portion of the joint fare. Authority for the demand, CTC said, was the District Public Utilities order setting up the 10-cent standard fare for CTC travel anywhere in the District beginning May 11.

Earlier, CTC asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to end the joint fares arrangement, and was joined in the request by the Arnold Lines and AB&W. The ICC refused to so order.

Besides its demand for the 10-cent "take," CTC also filed suit in District Court to compel ICC to permit cancellation of the joint-ride arrangement. This court action is still pending.

The Arnold Lines is already before the commission on another petition for general revision upward of its commuting fares between Washington and Virginia points. The requested fare boosts do not cover service to the Pentagon and other Army and Navy points.

An ICC examiner has recommended that the bus company be allowed to raise its rates in the first zone out of Washington to 15 cents from its present 10-cent fare, or 12½-cents on a takens basis. He also recommended an increase to 25 cents in the present 20-cent, fourth zone.

May Have Swallowed Poison 2-Year-Old Girl in Hosptal;

LINDA LOUISE LANGFORD
Critical

CONSTANCE EBERLE
Recovering

Two-year-old Linda Langford was critically ill at Providence Hospital last night as city officials investigated the possibility that she might have swallowed rat poison.

Two other youngsters were also at Providence after swallowing poisons, but their conditions were said to be good.

Doctors diagnosed Linda's condition as a combination of severe kidney and heart ailments, but said there was no way immediately to tell whether she had or had not been poisoned.

The child's mother, Mrs. Lillie Mae Langford, 323 I st. ne., voiced belief Linda might have swallowed rat bait placed around their yard by District Health Department employes.

Health Department officials investigated, but declared the type of poison used was such that a child who swallowed it would promptly throw it up, without effects other than an upset stomach.

They said the bait contains red squill poison, mixed with bread crumbs and molasses. They pointed out it works on rats because they are unable to throw it up. For humans, or dogs, the poison acts as a powerful emetic, causing immediate vomiting, and so could not penetrate the system far enough to cause serious illness, the officials said.

Also in Providence after drinking poisons, were:

Constance Eberle, 23-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth A. Eberle, 5210 P st. se., Carroll Hill, Md. She crawled under a crib and her parents' bed to find a small bottle of ant-killer. She drank a little, then when the bottle was taken away, cried for more. Her parents rushed her to Providence for treatment. Constance has a twin brother, Clifford, and an older sister, Sonja, 5.

Larry Luterel, 2, was taken to Providence by his father, James Luterel, after drinking kerosene by mistake at their home, 6748 Oxon Hill rd., Oxon Hill, Md.

Mrs. Langford said Linda had not been well since about the time the last batch of rat poison was put into their yard about the first week in August. Linda is one of five children. The others are Jean, 9, Alvin, 7, Roy, 4, and George, 4 months.

Landlords Demand 15% Rent Boosts In Capital

Association Asks Cogswell for Order Or Freedom Under 'Voluntary' Clause

Demands for across-the-board rent increases of 15 per cent for Washington landlords were made yesterday by the Building Owners and Managers Association.

The property owners in a letter to Rent Control Administrator Robert F. Cogswell asked that he order a flat increase of 15 per cent or that he permit property owners to increase rents up to 15 per cent under a "permissive agreement clause" now applicable to the rest of the country.

The sharply worded four-page letter said "we urge that you give immediate consideration to the question of whether you are not under a mandate to grant a general rent increase."

Cogswell said he had received the letter, the second to be sent to him by the association, and will have an answer sometime next week. He declined further comment.

In the first letter, the association asked permission to pass along to tenants increased taxes on personal and real property and water taxes. A spokesman for the association estimated at the time that this would amount to from 1 to 5 per cent of the current rents.

Terming the present administration of rent control an "intolerable economic burden" on property owners, the association said that Cogswell's failure to grant the early request is "costing Washington property owners approximately $14,000 per day in increased taxes alone."

The letter, which was signed by Marshall Davis, president of the association, pointed out that the Rent Control Administrator has the right under the law to adjust rent ceilings.

"You have the expressed, clearly expressed power, to make our model bill work as it was intended to work—fair to both landlord and tenant," the letter said.

Action Declared 'Brazen Demand to Violate Act'

The Washington Chapter of Americans for Democratic Action last night called the request of the Building Owners and Managers Association for 15 per cent rent increases here "a brazen demand to violate the District Emergency Rent Act."

The statement was part of a letter to Cogswell from Benjamin C. Sigal, president of the chapter:

"It is our opinion," the letter said, "that a general increase . . . would be wholly unwarranted and utterly inexcusable."

Sigal said that individual landlords groaning under burdens can apply for relief and have their ceilings raised.

Air, Bus, Rail Firms Expect Record Travel Over Weekend

Washington's transportation centers will click like turnstiles for the next several days as departing thousands pass incoming visitors for the Labor Day weekend.

Air, bus and rail officials agree that the exodus from the city has already started, but that the big press will start late today and reach its peak Friday.

Many Government employes, following an old practice, have taken their vacations to begin or end with the Labor Day weekend, a Government personnel executive said last night.

Many employes are asking for Tuesday off in the hope of avoiding the am of returnees Monday night, various Government personnel departments report.

Though passenger traffic is expected to equal and possibly exceed that of the 1946 Labor Day weekend, transportation officials say that some reservations for travel are still available.

The Housing Service of the Greater National Capital Committee also reports that hotel reservations are still available.

At Union Station officials said that a temporary ticket office is being set up to sell coach tickets.

All ticket selling locations inside the station will also be manned.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad reports that passenger traffic is already running heavy, and extra cars and second sections are being added to trains today, Friday, Saturday and Monday.

The Pennsylvania Railroad also is adding extra sections to its trains, particularly between here and New York.

American Airlines, reporting that "everyone seems to be leaving late Friday and early Saturday," is adding some extra sections to its flights. The company is canceling some Saturday flights to service equipment, but adding extra sections again Monday.

Capital Airlines plans on adding eight extra sections Friday, four on Saturday and 11 on Labor Day, in addition to its reguar 26 daily flights. Flights north and to Norfolk are most heavily booked, it reports.

Eastern Air Lines also reports a heavy reservation list despite the fact that it has more equipment in operation this year.

United Airlines predicted its "heaviest holiday weekend."

Greyhound Lines reports that it expects its heaviest traffic Friday afternoon and evening.

National Trailways, anticipating the "best yet" business, reports many inquiries about one and two-day trips to nearby points with "everybody trying to come back Monday night."

District motorists and those from nearby Maryland and Virginia have been bombarding the American Automobile Association with inquiries about the northeastern part of the country, especially Niagara Falls, according to Washington I. Cleveland, local division manager.

"In the past 10 days we have answered an average of 509 inquiries and personal calls each day," Cleveland said, "virtually all concerned with Labor Day travel."

Md. Postmasters Reelect Sibley As Chapter Head

Baltimore, Aug. 27 (AP).—Neal A. Sibley, Baltimore postmaster, was reelected president of the Maryland Chapter, National Association of Postmasters, at the closing session today of a three-day convention of postmasters and postal supervisors.

James C. Morton, also of Baltimore, was elected president of the State branch of the National Association of Postal Supervisors.

Approximately 150 delegates also elected: Postmasters—Guy K. Motter, Frederick, first vice president; Francis E. Thomas, Centreville, second vice president; Mrs. Wilma M. Berg, Mount Hays, secretary-treasurer; Herbert C. Estep, Glen Burnie, and Charlotte F. Morgan, Luke, national membership chairmen.

Supervisors—Alexander S. Proskey, Annapolis, first vice president; Harry A. Grimm, Baltimore, secretary-treasurer.

Yates' Opinion Backs D. C. in Armory Row

Nonmilitary use of the District Armory is more the province of District Commissioners than the National Guard, for whom it was built.

The opinion was given August 4 in a letter from United States Assistant Comptroller General Frank L. Yates to Postmaster General Robert E. Hannegan, it was disclosed yesterday. Hannegan sought use of the spacious armory for the Christmas mail rush and asked Yates where to apply.

"It would appear," wrote Yates, "that any agreement for the use of the building for the purpose stated should be approved by the Commissioners."

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, National Guard head, said last night he was not aware of the communication, but had agreed two months ago to grant Washington Postmaster Vincent Burke free Christmastime use of the armory.

The long-smoldering controversy over who has authority to regulate nonmilitary use of the Armory broke out afresh early this week over a proposed contract between the Guard and George Washington University. Awaiting final signature today, the contract asks $900 or 500 National Guard recruits for use of the drill hall November 1 for a homecoming dance.

District Auditor A. R. Pilkerton warned he would seize any cash rentals for the District general fund rather than have the money turned over by the Guard to one of its units.

Navy Speeds Maps By Radiophoto

San Francisco (U.P.).—The Navy can now prepare a weather map of any spot in the central Pacific within 30 minutes after the weather changes anywhere along the line of an 8500-mile radiophoto system.

Weather stations in Guam, Honolulu and San Francisco prepare maps which give detailed pictures of the situation in their areas. Within half an hour, these charts can be transmitted along the whole chain of bases from the China coast to Washington.

The instantaneous transmission of weather data is of particular importance to airmen planning long flights. Ordinary cabled weather reports are not fast enough to keep aviation units abreast of conditions.

Plans Speeded to Construct Airport on Kingman Island

Moves to build a private airport on Kingman Island were accelerated last night to coincide with a scheduled survey flight over the Nation's new Skyway No. 1.

The Skyway, a 40-mile-wide belt of identifications for private fliers, has been officially designed for air marking by the Civil Aeronautics Administration. It will link Washington and Los Angeles, bringing two converging North and South routes into the Capital.

The question "What will pilots on Skyway No. 1 use for an airport here?" asked on a WGAY radio program last night, touched off the Kingman Island project speedup.

Island Meets Requirements

Rufus C. Phillips, jr., president of Airways Engineering Consultants, Inc., and airport consultant for the Washington Aviation Planning Council, told the WGAY audience that Kingman Island, in the Anacostia River at Benning rd., is the "'only available location which fulfills requirements."

Participating in an interview with Grant Stetter, council vice chairman, and Jean Ross Howard, staff assistant to the personal aircraft council of the Aircraft Industries Association, Phillips urged immediate use of available Federal funds for the project.

Phillips said CAA has $132,964 for Washington airport improvements if the sum is matched by the Commissioners. He added, however, that the Kingman airpark "could be constructed and put into operation for considerably less" than the Federal funds and those supplied by Washington.

Yesterday, the Board of Trade announced that President John Reilly, first vice president P. Y. K. Howat and W. L. Jack Nelson, chairman of the board's aviation committee, will participate in the first survey flights over the transcontinental skyway beginning September 8.

Skyway1 will reach from Los Angeles to Abilene, Tex., then branch out into Skyway 1 North, and Skyway 1 South. The Northern route will go through Oklahoma City, St. Louis, Missouri, Indianapolis, Piftsburgh to Washington; South will cover Montgomery, Ala., and Atlanta.

Tax-and-Tax Job Obstacles Bring Police

Pilgrim's progress came to an abrupt halt in Municipal Court yesterday when Oscar Theowore Pilgrim, 47, was held on $300 bond on eight charges of false pretenses.

According to police, Pilgrim promised to get Pelcio Richardson, 1290 G st. ne., a job as a chauffeur at the French Embassy. But to so there were some minor details to clear up which would require a slight cash outlay.

And so, on June 7, according to police, Richardson payed Pilgrim $35 for a "chauffeur's license."

Two weeks later, it was alleged, Richardson forked over $45 more for a "pistol license," and the following day was nicked $30 to join the "Chauffeur's Union."

Only two more days elapsed, Richardson said, when he handed Pilgrim $49 for an "insurance policy."

In the next two weeks, Richardson said he made the following payments: $35 for a "special police badge"; $45 for "auto insurance"; and $25 for a "chauffeur's badge."

The last straw, Richardson said, was a $42.50 payment for "road tax."

With $308.50 already paid out and the promised job still not secured, the would-be chauffeur grew suspicious enough to make inquiries at the French Embassy.

By this time, he was not overly-surprised to find the job nonexistent and he notified police.

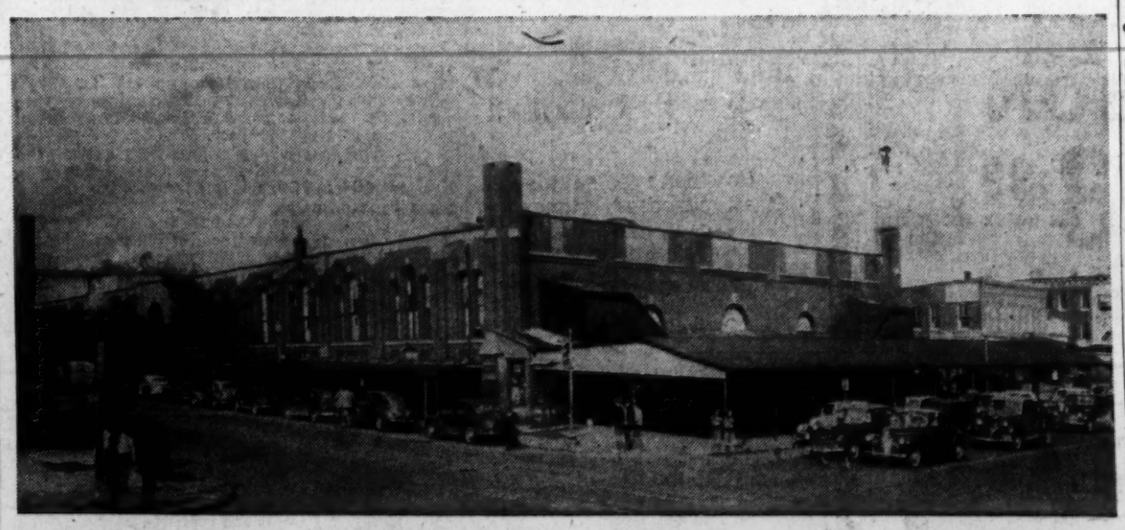
City's Biggest Market Plans to Park 250 Autos on Roof



The Washington Post.

Plans call for auto parking atop Center Market, 5th and K sts. nw., the second floor of which—once occupied by a bowling alley—was destroyed by fire in March, 1945

Customers of the New Center Market, 5th and K sts. nw., will soon find a completely modernized market there. Better than that, they'll be able to park their cars on the roof.

Plans to modernize the first floor and provide parking space for 250 cars came to light yesterday with a report that the Washington Convention Hall Co. is selling the property to a newly created corporation for approximately $500,000.

A spokesman for Leo M. Bernstein & Co., representing the new corporation, said final settlement will be made in the next few days. He named the new owner as the Second Realty Corp., incorporated in Delaware. He declined to name its officers.

The market is the largest under one roof in Washington, he said. None of the approximately 100 tenants, who lease and operate the 212 stands on the first floor, will be affected by the change of ownership, he declared.

The second floor, once a bowling ayyel, was destroyed by fire in March, 1946. The second floor, now the roof, will be used for parking. Its heavy concrete floor, supported by steel girders, will be large enough and strong enough to park 250 cars, he said. A ramp will be constructed.

The market, covering more than an acre, opened in January, 1875. The property is assessed at $368,452, of which $234,452 is for the land.

It has been user for concerts, dances, plays and even rivals, and, until the big fire, housed a 55-alley bowling center, at that time the largest one-floor bowling alley in the world.

Population Is Returning To Va. Farms

Richmond, Va., Aug. 27 (AP).—Farm population in Virginia, which fell to an all-time low in 1945, gradually is climbing back toward its prewar level, a report of the Virginia Cooperative Crop Reporting Service indicated today.

The State's current farm population was estimated at about 950,000 persons, considerably below the 1921 level of 1,074,000. An accurate count in 1945 placed the number of rural dwellers at 857,000, but Virginia is believed to have shared in a regional farm population increase of 11 per cent in the past two years.

The South as a whole is suffering major losses in farm population, the report indicated. In the Louisiana-Arkansas-Mississippi regions, the number of farm residents dropped more than 25 per cent between 1940 and 1945, and only 50 to 60 per cent of this loss has been regained with the return of servicemen and the war's end.

In the Nation as a whole, farm population is increasing for the second successive year, but the level remains below the prewar figure, the service said.

Labor Division Is Created in Chest Setup

The Community Chest Federation yesterday announced the creation of a labor participation department, to give trade unionists "fuller participation in planning, operation and support of community health and welfare services."

Miss Sylvia Altman, Central Labor Union delegate and one-time special adviser to the president and executive board of Musicians Union Local 161, was named manager of the new department. Announcement was made by Daniel W. Bell, president of the six-Chest federation.

Formation of the department recalls public protest in the midst of last year's fund-raising campaign by AFL members. They protested appointment of Dan Holland, Coca Cola Co. executive, as head of the fund's business unit, charging he was "inimical" to labor interests.

More recently, Henry Beitscher, representative of the Washington Industrial Union Council, charged that the Citizens' Study Committee investigating Chest operations was predominantly made up of businessmen and real estate representatives. He urged greater labor voice in Chest activities.

The Labor Participation Department, Bell said, will aim at close integration of organized labor and working people with all phases of federation activities. It should provide a "much more sympathetic representation" for union members than in the past, he added.

Miss Altman, of 1601 Argonne pl. nw., is former executive assistant to the Secretary of the Interior and NBC writer and musician. She is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of New York University, and has completed work for a Ph. D. degree in social psychology.

As part of her work she will be responsible for keeping union members and labor organizations informed on matters concerning Community Chest agencies, the services that are available, and problems the agencies face.

The Community Chest Federation seeks to raise $3,900,000 between November 12 and November 25.

Survey Nears End

Rules Set For Clinics On Cancer

The District Medical Society yesterday recommended standards for cancer detection clinics here.

The District Health Department, meanwhile, neared completion of a survey, instituted in January with the United States Public Health Service, to determine incidence of cancer in this area.

The survey, to be completed by October 1, may determine the number and locations of cancer detection clinics, for which the medical society recommendations set up standards, as requested by the District division of the American Cancer Society.

Recommendations Listed

The medical society recommended:

1. That directors of cancer detection clinics be chiefs of one of the medical services at the hospital where the clinic is located.

2. That one physician be responsible for complete examination of the individual.

3. That clinic heads make all appointments to their staffs, and that they encourage their staff doctors to take part in this clinic work with "appropriate compensation."

4. That a $10 "contribution fee" be set as the standard examination fee to those who can afford to pay. (Present costs for thorough tests run a minimum of $30 to $35, one physician said.)

5 FIVE FIVE N

5. That the examinations be standardized among the participating clinics.

6. That the clinics operate at least two half-days a week.

Statistics Collected

The cancer survey's collection of statistics from physicians has been virtually completed. Remaining to be done is the tabulating of information received to show where and when cancer has struck in this area and other data never before compiled here.

Washington has only one cancer detection clinic now. At Garfield Hospital, it is under Dr. Calvin T. Klopp, who reported yesterday his staff has been unable to keep up with requests for examinations.

In its first six months, Dr. Klopp said, the clinic examined 150 persons, all apparently healthy, and found four cases of cancer. The 150 came from a waiting list of 400. And even with its policy of not publicizing its work, the clinic head said, applications continue to come in.

Appointment Contested

Baltimore, Aug. 27 (AP).—A Baltimore theater operator today filed mandamus proceedings against Governor Lane and Rodney Collier contesting the latter's right to a gubernatorial appointment to the State Board of Examiners for Moving Picture Machine Operators.

Robert T. Marhenke asked for a writ of mandamus, which would require Collier to vacate the position, and contended that he was not a licensed motion picture machine operator.

Marhenke's petition pointed out that Maryland law requires the board of examiners be made up of one man from the Board of Fire Underwriters, one licensed operator, and one exhibitor who also is a licensed operator.

Collier, it said, was named as an exhibitor, but does not hold a license to operate a machine.

Mrs. Hooff Of Alexandria Is Dead at 67

Mrs. Charles R. Hooff, descendant of John Carlyle, one of the founders of Alexandria, and a pioneer in the restoration of many Colonial homes of that city, died yesterday at the age of 67.

Mrs. Hooff passed away at Circle Terrace Hospital in Alexandria after a long illness.

She was born in 1880 in Baltimore, the daughter of Elizabeth C. A. Herbert and Gen. James R. Herbert of the Confederate Army. She was also descended from Lord Thomas Fairfax, who in the eighteenth century possessed six million acres between the Potomac and the Rappahannock rivers.

In 1938, Mrs. Hooff was one of four women who brought the old colonial Virginia cotillion back into prominence. Long interested in preserving the charm of historic Alexandria homes, she was one of the early workers who pioneered in restoration of many old colonial residences.

She was a member of the Colonial Dames of Virginia, and made her home on Seminary Hill, Alexandria. She was the founder several years ago of the real estate firm which bears her name.

Besides her husband, Charles R. Hooff, of the Seminary Hill address, she is survived by four sons, two of them by a former marriage. They are: Courtland H. Smith, 3d, of Chevy Chase; Lieut. Col. Mark Smith of San Juan, Puerto Rico, and Charles R. jr., and John C. H. Hooff, of Alexandria. Seven grandchildren also survive.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. at Emmanuel Church On The Hill, Alexandria, with interment in Ivy Hill Cemetery there.

For nine years he was an employe of the House of Representatives in Washington. In 1895 he was graduated from Georgetown University and later took law courses at the University of Virginia.

In 1899 Justice Browning formed a law partnership with Judge James Hay at Madison. After moving to Orange, he was for four years a partner of the late John G. Williams and then was associated with Alexander T. Browning. From 1922 he practiced law with S. M. Nottingham of Orange.

Justice Browning was a member of the State Legislature from 1912 to 1916, representing Orange County. During World War I he was chairman of the Liberty Loan Committee, the Savings Stamp Campaign and the Four-Minute Men. While in the State Legislature he was a member of the Economy Efficiency Committee.

On February 27, 1905, he married Mrs. Eva B. Hill Ransom of Culpeper County, who died at their Orange home in March, 1940.

He had been a member of the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals since February 19, 1930. At the time of his death, Justice Browning was serving his second 12-year term.

2 U. S. Aides Escape Sikh Murder of 15

Lahore, Pakistan, Aug. 27 (AP).—Two U. S. State Department employes said today a Sikh mob held up the train on which they were riding, killed 15 Mohammedan passengers and twice attempted to force a way into the Americans' compartment.

Lieut. Col. Charles Caple of Little Rock, Ark., air attache to the U. S. Embassy in New Delhi, and Miss Jane Loranger of Sacramento, Calif., U. S. Information Service employe at New Delhi, said their train was stopped Sunday at the village of Muir.

The Americans said the Sikhs smashed their compartment window and attempted to break in their door. They forced the adjoining compartment and slaughtered three men and a woman.

Caple said troops at the junction city of Bhatinda removed 11 bodies from the train and left aboard five injured, four of whom died before the train reached Ferozepore, where a military guard of 20 troops was put on.

Reports of fatal rioting along the border of Pakistan and India in the partitioned Punjas continued. The Sikhs were incensed because many of their leading shrines and temples plus a million or more of their fellows were placed in Moslem Pakistan.

Hundreds of Hindu and Sikh refugees crowded station platforms in Lahore, seeking flight flight from the Moslem-dominated areas and reprisals.

Death Takes Lee Hechinger, Retired District Hotel Owner

Lee Hechinger, retired Washington hotel owner and resident of the District for 70 years, died yesterday at Emergency Hospital after an illness of two months. He was 79.

Mr. Hechinger, a native of Baltimore, came to this city as a child of nine. The growth of Washington from a small town to its present size, which he had witnessed, was a favorite topic of conversation with him.

Around the turn of the century, he took over ownership and operation of two hotels, known as the American House and the Commercial House, at 638 and 640 Pennsylvania ave. nw. They were favorites of Washington visitors until 1931, when the Government bought the property and built the Apex building, now housing the Federal Trade Commission, there.

Mr. Hechinger had been a noted horseman, and showed trotting horses throughout Virginia and Maryland. He was proud of his trophy case, which contained blue ribbons from Laurel, Havre de Grace, Culpeper, Manassas and Middleburg.

He had made his home at 621 Pennsylvania ave. nw. since 1931, with his wife, Mrs. Julia Moran Hechinger, who survives him.

Besides his widow, he is survived by a son, S. L. Hechinger, of 5921 Kansas ave. nw., two nephews, Lawrence Gassenheimer, of the Pennsylvania Hotel, and Sidney L. Hechinger, of the Westchester apartments, and a niece, Mrs. Leona H. Roller, of the Broadmoor apartments.

Private funeral services will be held tomorrow at Gawler's funeral home, 1756 Pennsylvania ave. nw. Interment, also private, will be in Congressional cemetery.

Weimer of Chancellor; William E. Weimer, of Falmouth, and George A. Weimer, of Fredericksburg; two brothers, Lewis Weimer, of Oakland, Md., and Edwin Weimer, Morgantown, W. Va.; 28 grandchildren and 31 great-grandchildren.

Mother Is Disturbed, Sisters Are Furious, As Youth, 20, Unbends to Ardent Pursuit Of Business Woman, 29, Who Seeks Marriage

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My son, 20, spends practically every evening and all his free time with a former co-worker of mine, a woman 29, who is a very capable, diplomatic, highly paid office manager.

They met when I gave a party on his return from the service. She fell madly in love and has openly pursued him. He is fine looking and looks perhaps 24, but he is only 20 emotionally and isn't established economically.

At first he treated her rather badly, breaking dates and often ignoring her. He has always been very popular with boys and girls, and she suffered and wept and was very miserable when she couldn't gain his attention. She is very determined to marry him; in fact, has told mutual friends she is willing to marry him if the marriage lasts only one month.

Mother Speaks Mind to Woman

HER ATTITUDE toward me has altered considerably. She is still friendly but on guard, as I have told her she is foolish to waste her time on Jack; that she should accept dates from men her age and older, who can take her places, spend money on her and eventually marry her.

Also, I've told her she should marry a man financially able to give her a home, so she may quit work and have babies, as she always professed great love for children. Much of this past year Jack has been in school or between jobs or in poorly paid jobs, and she has entertained him in her home, taken him on trips in her car, had opera tickets, etc.

He laughs about how she tries to manage him and admits she is trying to maneuver him into marriage. He insists he isn't going to marry her or anyone for many years. Still he will not break off. His sisters are furious. They say she is taking advantage of his youth and that I shouldn't stand for what goes on.

She has good morals and high standards. I believe she is silly but not bad. I am truly befuddled. What course should I take? Jack may marry her and I don't want to do anything that might keep us from being friends later. I want only his happiness. I feel kindly toward the girl and wanted her treated right too. C. R.

Lad's Behavior Is Hypocritical

DEAR C. R.: Jack is a mother-spoiled lad, I gather; fine looking on the outside, infantile on the inside, with much less character than his 20 years call for and rather a bounder, in a two-faced parasitical way, in relation to the young woman who is madly infatuated.

I think he's a bounder in the sense that actually he's very receptive to her suit, but too craven in the face of your opposition to be honest about it.

I daresay he takes to this capable older girl's extravagant worship and social pampering like a duck to water—finding it the ideal, indeed the irresistible, romantic variation of that lush fond mothering to which he's been accustomed.

Lacks Courage To Defy Mother

BUT conditioned as he is, by past experience, to basking in your lenient approbation of his every move, the situation finds him psychologically unprepared to boldly controvert your pained objections to a theoretically peculiar affinity.

Hence his caddish pretense of taking her lightly, his sniggering about her in the bosom of the family, etc., while lapping up her favors and spending increasing time in her company. Jack is a very unmanly fellow, in relation to both mother and inamorata—and his occupational record this past year is ominously unstable.

Assuming the girl, with her gifts for leadership, could "manage" Jack into social growth and a steady pace, she'd be doing more for him than his family has done, or can do now,—also more than a girl should undertake toward an immature male. But if she loves him enough to tackle the burden and risk, my advice is to squelch Jack's callow cynicism and give her a chance, by setting him an example of great respect for her personality and fine appreciation of her devoted interest. M. H.

Stops Absenteeism

Monday absenteeism of women employes came quickly to an end when the Mohawk Carpet Mills, Amsterdam, N. Y., provided wash-day service in each of its two plants. Each laundry is equipped with washing machines. In the words of the Philadelphia Bulletin: Blue Monday is no gag to industrial plants that employ many women. Many of their feminine workers are apt to take the day off to do the weekly wash. Or maybe fail to show up on Tuesday because of backache.

B. H. WRAGGE LEADS OFF WITH IMPORTANT HIGH-FASHION FEATURE

JULIUS GARFINCKEL & CO. REPORTING

Easiest shortcut to the new fashion feeling is a B. H. Wragge fullskirt. Women who dress with distinction and who don't want to put a lot of money in casual sportswear can build an exciting new wardrobe around it. The godet skirt in rayon crepe blossoms from smoothly rounded hips, left. The shepherd check woolen, right, balloons from a tiny waist. It was sketched over hip pads.

The B. H. Wragge collection takes in all the important new features: skirts long and full, or long and slim; tiny waists and rounded hips; shoulders brought back to normal and gently curved. We see a revival of sweater collections to give variety to the important new separate skirt. You'll find their natural shoulders just right.

The extra-short wool jacket, sketched, was designed for the fullskirt. It's also good with a B. H. Wragge rayon crepe shirtwaist dress, in the same color, and makes a smart dinner costume with a slim ankle-length wool skirt to match.

Ideas borrowed from traditional men's wear give snap and form connecting links in the interrelated B. H. Wragge wardrobe: very dark banker's grey flannel . . . guardsman stripes (as in blouse at left) . . . cravat foulard . . . and the color buff, particularly handsome with very dark grey.

Meet Mevorah

He Explains Bulgaria to Benighted U. S.

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

"ONE MUSTN'T burn the blanket to kill the bedbug," stated Minister Plenipotentiary Nisim Mevorah, sent to explain Bulgaria's case to the United Nations Security Council. Thus, in fluent French, Communist Party Member Mevorah cynically tossed off the phony trial and death sentence of Nicola Petkov, Bulgarian anti-Communist opposition leader.

Mevorah didn't coin this picaresque phrase—it's a favorite of his boss, Moscow-trained Premier Georgi Dimitrov. Now a blanket, to a Bulgarian, means wealth, and translated into less idiomatic English, Mevorah implied "Petkov no big shot"—that his sentence, which for weeks has made headline news here, is unimportant in Bulgaria.

Of course, it's not Petkov himself the Communists are after—he's incidental. They want to destroy American prestige, for the opposition leader stands for our kind of democracy, and if he is executed, a darkly oppressed people lose their sole symbol of freedom.

Slick Lawyer

AFTER SEEING so many exiled leaders in Washington Mevorah is an interesting contrast. Of Turkish-Jewish origin, he's one of Bulgaria's smartest lawyers; was trained, and handed an imposing title, by Georgi Dimitrov. He has been most instrumental in framing the new Bulgarian constitution, which is easing the country's transition from individual identity to Soviet province.

In appearance he's completely intellectual. The Mevorah forelock hangs over one eye, his conversation is slick, convincing to the uninitiated; and his reasoning, based on fanatic Communist adherence, is as tortured as his deeply seamed face.

When asked about two Bulgarian generals who fought stanchly with the Russians against the Germans, but today are held incommunicado and have undergone unmentionable tortures, he pretended ignorance of their whereabouts. But added that stringent measure had to be taken—and we would find out when we had to combat Communist riots in this country.

"No Lynchings"

WHEN told, somewhat smugly to be sure, that Communist riots were impossible here, and that torture at all times was indefensible, Mevorah quickly replied "Ah, but you have lynchings here. We have nothing like this in Bulgaria."

"This, from a Communist native of a country where over 50,000 people have been purged merely for political beliefs!"

However, Mr. Mevorah likes America. He's to stay on and explain Bulgaria at the United Nations, and, quite wisely, he's asked to have his family join him in this benighted, uncommunistic land.

Jangos Plan Open House On Anniversary

The JANGO Exchange, operated by the Army-Navy Guild Organization, will observe its first anniversary with an open house at headquarters, 1704 K st. nw., September 9.

Many changes can be noted since the opening of the shop in 1946. At that time the exchange was located on the third floor, now it has moved to first. Not quite a year old, the Army-Navy JANGO Exchange this week made its second and third contributions to local welfare work. Two checks, each for $150, were presented by Mrs. John Webster Bowman, JANGO president, and wife of Capt. Bowman, USMC, to the endowment fund of the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club and to the Boys Club of Washington.

Mrs. William Arnold, wife of General Arnold, USA, president of the Woman's Army and Navy League that sponsors and operates the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club, accepted the check on behalf of the endowment fund committee of the organization.

Catholic Jr. Women's Group Will Aid European Families

When Miss Beatrice M. Hoffman, of Mount Kisco, N. Y., national director, Junior Catholic Daughters of America, returns from Rome in late September, the organization will launch a three-fold international relations program, including relief to European families and orphans. So report Miss Betty Morris, chairman of the Washington Junior CDA, and Miss Irene Kondrak, also of this city, who has been named a member of the committee that will help promote the broadscale program for the juniors.

The international program, adopted at a recent leadership institute and workshop, sponsored by the National Department of the Junior Catholic Daughters of America at Notre Dame College in South Euclid, Ohio, will promote, in addition to relief, a correspondence exchange and study program aiming toward a better understanding of the Christian culture, customs and problems of Europe.

Miss Morris explained that the relief program calls for each junior court to adopt at least one European family next year which will be selected and authenticated by the War Relief of the National Catholic Welfare Conferences.

Another phase of the relief program will be a "Sweater and Sweets" campaign, to be known as an S. and S. campaign for the relief of orphans in European institutions. The third phase of the program will be developed through exchange of personal correspondence as part of the junior study program for next year, according to Miss Morris.

Your Questions On Homemaking

1. Can you tell me the best method for packing linens and blankets before shipping them overseas, and for storing them in a damp climate?

2. I have a white plastic purse that has been stored next to a light tan leather one. It now has some brown stains. Can you tell me how to remove them?

M. T. B.

1. A good, stout trunk or chest is the first requisite for successful overseas shipping. Linens and blankets should be well protected with cloth (old sheets will do) or wrapping paper inside the trunk. Wash or dry clean all articles before shipping and storing, as soiled articles are more likely to mildew than clean ones. Do not leave sizing or laundry starch in fabrics since molds feed on these finishes. If linens are to be stored for long, do not blue or iron them. Be sure to use plenty of moth preventative in packing the blankets. And dry everything—including the trunk—thoroughly in the sun just before packing.

2. Scrubbing with a mild household cleanser may remove some of the stain from your plastic purse. Hydrogen peroxide, diluted with water, can be used to bleach the spots. Try it out first on an inconspicuous part of the bag to be sure it won't damage the plastic.

1. Can you tell me how to remove perspiration odors from clothing? It seems no matter how often they are sent to the cleaners, the odor still remains.

2. What would you suggest to help get rid of closet odors?

R. B.

1. Perspiration is not soluble in dry cleaning fluid, so such odors sometimes cling to clothes that are always dry cleaned. Ask your cleaner if he thinks the color and fabric of these clothes will stand steam spotting under the arms and around the neck. That will help get rid of the odor. A complete laundering would be even more effective if the clothes can take it. You can treat light-colored clothes at home with powdered pepsin to eradicate perspiration odors. First, sponge perspiration-soaked areas with water to which a few drops of vinegar has been added. Then sprinkle on powdered pepsin and work it well into the cloth. Let stand one to two hours, keeping the spot moist. Then brush off powder and rinse well by sponging with clear water.

2. Deodorizing sprays for closets are sold in the household goods sections of several local department stores. To help keep odors down, air closets often and do not store dirty clothes in them.

I spilled a bottle of iodine on a white washable chenille rug. Is it possible to remove the stain? If so, how? B. C.

Soap and water will often remove a fresh iodine stain. Or moisten the spot with water and place either in the sun, over a warm radiator, or hold in the steam from a boiling teakettle. Sponging with alcohol will help get rid of the last traces of the stain.

Will you please print a recipe for meringues?

A recipe that will make 3 dozen large and 5 dozen small meringues follows:

4 egg whites
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup fine granulated sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla

Beat egg whites until frothy. Sprinkle salt over top and beat until stiff. Gradually beat in ½ of sugar, adding 2 tablespoons at a time. Add flavoring, then fold in remaining sugar. With pastry bag or spoon, shape in mounds on ungreased, paper-covered baking sheet. Bake in slow oven (275 degrees) for 45 to 60 minutes, or until very delicately browned and dry on the surface. Remove from paper while warm. If bowl is placed over hot water while folding in last ½ cup sugar, the cakes are less likely to crack during baking.

Mother Needn't Fear 'Cussin'' Child Picks Up From Playmates

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

What privilege has the parent of denying a child friendship with another child of whose actions she disapproved? This is a big question.

Parents have the responsibility of censoring the behavior of their children's companions and arriving at decisions about them. But a parent cannot always fathom why one child, or another, is compatible with her own child. She may dislike this child's looks, acts, manners or family background, but there is something about the child, despite these drawbacks, which sets the bud of friendship to blooming. Companionship is there and a mutual interest. This is vital and important to the growing personality of any child. Parents would do well to think many times before setting out to destroy an existing friendship.

Mother's Qualms

An Anxious Mother is already feeling qualms about her interference. She writes, "Should a mother attempt to choose the friends for her 5-year-old girl? My little girl has been coming home with some very bad language and habits. I have tried to explain to her but to no avail. Gradually, it has become worse. Finally in desperation, I forbade her friendship with this companion. Now, when I see her alone I wonder if I was wrong. When she goes to school she will have to choose between right and wrong. Then, again, I feel the importance of these impressionable years. I would like your opinion."

If bad words are all that you have against the companion, your child might pick those up anywhere. Maybe the other mother feels your child is a bad influence; have you thought of that?

Every mother is certain to think everything her child does is to be blamed on other children. Yet profanity develops naturally because the child is thrilled to use new and "adult-type" words. You did not elucidate as to the nature of the bad habits so I have no opinion about those.

Child to Meet All

But, in general, children will encounter all kinds of behavior different from what is approved at home and will be temporarily influenced by it. But your influence is constant and eventually the child will adopt the behavior which you approve and practice in your home.

Keep this playmate under your supervision for awhile and you may get a different viewpoint of her and her behavior. If she misbehaves send her home with the privilege of coming another day when she can behave. Children are children, not criminals, and it is better to give them an opportunity to behave than to ostracize them permanently for childish behavior of which any child might be capable.

Your Questions On Homemaking

1. Can you tell me the best method for packing linens and blankets before shipping them overseas, and for storing them in a damp climate?

2. I have a white plastic purse that has been stored next to a light tan leather one. It now has some brown stains. Can you tell me how to remove them?

M. T. B.

1. A good, stout trunk or chest is the first requisite for successful overseas shipping. Linens and blankets should be well protected with cloth (old sheets will do) or wrapping paper inside the trunk. Wash or dry clean all articles before shipping and storing, as soiled articles are more likely to mildew than clean ones. Do not leave sizing or laundry starch in fabrics since molds feed on these finishes. If linens are to be stored for long, do not blue or iron them. Be sure to use plenty of moth preventative in packing the blankets. And dry everything—including the trunk—thoroughly in the sun just before packing.

2. Scrubbing with a mild household cleanser may remove some of the stain from your plastic purse. Hydrogen peroxide, diluted with water, can be used to bleach the spots. Try it out first on an inconspicuous part of the bag to be sure it won't damage the plastic.

1. Can you tell me how to remove perspiration odors from clothing? It seems no matter how often they are sent to the cleaners, the odor still remains.

2. What would you suggest to help get rid of closet odors?

R. B.

1. Perspiration is not soluble in dry cleaning fluid, so such odors sometimes cling to clothes that are always dry cleaned. Ask your cleaner if he thinks the color and fabric of these clothes will stand steam spotting under the arms and around the neck. That will help get rid of the odor. A complete laundering would be even more effective if the clothes can take it. You can treat light-colored clothes at home with powdered pepsin to eradicate perspiration odors. First, sponge perspiration-soaked areas with water to which a few drops of vinegar has been added. Then sprinkle on powdered pepsin and work it well into the cloth. Let stand one to two hours, keeping the spot moist. Then brush off powder and rinse well by sponging with clear water.

2. Deodorizing sprays for closets are sold in the household goods sections of several local department stores. To help keep odors down, air closets often and do not store dirty clothes in them.

I spilled a bottle of iodine on a white washable chenille rug. Is it possible to remove the stain? If so, how? B. C.

Soap and water will often remove a fresh iodine stain. Or moisten the spot with water and place either in the sun, over a warm radiator, or hold in the steam from a boiling teakettle. Sponging with alcohol will help get rid of the last traces of the stain.

Will you please print a recipe for meringues?

A recipe that will make 3 dozen large and 5 dozen small meringues follows:

4 egg whites
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup fine granulated sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla

Beat egg whites until frothy. Sprinkle salt over top and beat until stiff. Gradually beat in ½ of sugar, adding 2 tablespoons at a time. Add flavoring, then fold in remaining sugar. With pastry bag or spoon, shape in mounds on ungreased, paper-covered baking sheet. Bake in slow oven (275 degrees) for 45 to 60 minutes, or until very delicately browned and dry on the surface. Remove from paper while warm. If bowl is placed over hot water while folding in last ½ cup sugar, the cakes are less likely to crack during baking.

2200 Disabled Veterans oGt Autos in 1947

Disabled District veterans received 2200 automobiles during the 1947 fiscal year because the Veterans Service Center set up a priority system with car manufacturers.

This was revealed yesterday by Col. Waldron E. Leonard, director, in his annual report to the Commissioners.

Col. Leonard said the service center had obtained priorities for veterans who furnished proof "that the car was needed in the livelihood of the veteran."

Housing was obtained for more than 10 per cent of the 6473 former servicemen who sought aid in finding apartments or houses, he reported.

A total of 107,488 veterans sought help of one type or another during the year, Col. Leonard revealed.

Service attracting the largest number of veterans were free notary public aid and free photostatic copies of official papers, he revealed. Approximately 1000 papers were notarized per month. And 33,700 photostats were made, representing a saving of approximately $50,000 to the former servicemen.

Organizations assisting at the center included the Civil Service Commission, Veteran's Administration, War Assets Administration, United States Employment Service, American Red Cross, American Women's Voluntary Society, the Commerce Department and insurance underwriters.

Gangs are City Problem

Huntington, W. Va., Aug. 27 (AP).—School officials met with County Prosecutor Edward H. Greene today to discuss methods of stopping gang beatings by teenaged boys after a Juvenile Court judge delivered a scathing 45-minute lecture to a 17-year-old convicted of assault.

The conference was requested by Greene after an inquiry by his office into gang operations of students in junior and high schools here.

Two other youths have been held for October grand jury action on charges of felonious assault and breaking and entering in one of the alleged group assaults.

Tuck to Attend Picnic

Grundy, Va., Aug. 27 (AP).—Governor Tuck and Representative John W. Flannagan, jr. (D., Va.) are among the Virginians who will address an all-day picnic outing at the breaks in the Cumberlands, in the mountains of western Buchanan County, September 14. The program for the outing will include a fish fry sponsored by the Pike County (Ky.) Fish and Game Commission.

Citizens Fight To Preserve Market House

Galena, Ill., (U.P.)—Galena citizens are waging a campaign to save the city's market house where slaves were once sold at auction and Ulysses S. Grant bartered for hogs.

Architects describe the building as one of the finest examples of class design in the Midwest.

The market house stands on the Mississippi River levee. Its brick walls are deteriorating and the building has fallen into disuse.

At one time it was the scene of colorful activity as housewives and tradespeople bargained over produce. A "flying" staircase led to the second floor city council chambers and in adjoining cells, prisoners gazed from barred windows.

City officials have asked the State to preserve the building as a memorial.

Collector's Item: One Americana Anthology—Free!

Alberta Hutchinson Douglas, of 4836 South 29th st., Arlington, Va., has a wonderful accumulation of Americana for some interested collector or museum.

Mrs. Douglas was widowed two years ago, and broke up her home—so she doesn't have room for the collection any longer. She's willing to give it to whoever can make the best use of it.

Her father was Fred Bailey Hutchinson, a nephew of the James A. Bailey whose name became a household word with the growth of the Barnum & Bailey Circus.

Fred traveled all over the world with the circus, and collected many letters and notes written by Buffalo Bill Cody, the original Annie Oakley, P. T. Barnum, and many others.

The collection includes photographs, handbills, and other authentic records of a glamorous chapter in American history.

WASHINGTONIANS SLEEP HERE

Keith Brown, the Dun and Bradstreet reporter, lives in one of the oldest houses in this vicinity.

It's at 305 Cameron st., Alexandria, Va., and Keith says it was built in 1752.

Does anybody know of any older dwellings hereabouts? Some of the Government "temporary" buildings are probably older than that.

WONDER-FUL ITEM

The London Times recently carried a half-column report of a cricket match played at Lord's. After struggling valiantly to the final paragraph, I found that the story ended thus:

"The score had risen to 170 when Ames popped a ball into the hands of silly point, and when Valentine was caught close in on the leg side and J. G. W. Davis was leg before wicket the large crowd left the ground wondering."

And how do you think all this has left me, you blighters?

FINANCIAL NOTE

Doris Burritt, of 3516 A st. se., reports that an Anacostia merchant employs a novel method of transporting his daily deposits to the bank.

The merchant puts his money in a cash bag and turns it over to a ferocious St. Bernard. The dog trots serenely to the bank without a single worry about holdup men.

I haven't had a chance to interview the St. Bernard yet, but I presume that he keeps his own savings buried in the back yard.

After all, what banker could figure the interest on six bones?

PET PEEVE

L. F. H., of the Hotel 2400, says:

"My pet peeve is females who use lipstick to draw unnatural lips—putting the lipstick over and below the natural lines of the lips, like clowns in a circus.

"Please don't identify me too closely on this."

IRISH STORY

Robert Emmet Burke, of 4345 Ellicott st. nw., wonders if I know how green came to be the recognized color of Ireland, and offers to explain if I don't.

I accept the offer, and while we're waiting for the explanation, here's a yarn that he spins.

It's about the Englishman and the American who were arguing about the proper pronunciation of "neither."

The American insisted it was "nee-ther" and the Englishman was sure that it was "nye-ther." So they decided to let an Irishman arbitrate the dispute, and he told them:

"You're both wrong, boys—it's 'nay-ther.'"

Grin and Bear It

"Here's our new schedule, men!—we make 5 pictures—an epic, a supercolossal, a stupendous, a miracle, and one worth going to see!"

'Life With Mother' Is on the Way

NEW YORK.—At the United Nations Dr. Harold Urey, Dr. Leo Szilard and Dr. Harrison Brown—three men who contributed so much to the success of the atom bomb—had a private session with 10 U. N. officials. After the discussion was over Dr. Szilard said he'd like to ask two questions. "The first question," he began. "Is there anyone among you who believes that the United Nations will have a controlling influence in the world within the next two years?" . . . "The second question," Dr. Szilard continued. "If there is such a person among you, what odds would you want on a small bet about it?"

After years of planning the project, Russel Crouse and Howard Lindsay will start writing "Life With Mother" next week . . . Fiorello LaGuardia is finishing his autobiography . . . LaGuardia, incidentally, will have Robert Moses as his guest star for Sunday's broadcast. Moses has been the target of LaGuardia's attacks for years. His topic will be "A Public Works Program for the City"—a subject about which he and Fiorello long have fought.

The story is being told of the day when the Royal family, during their visit to South Africa, met a Boer farmer who wasn't reluctant about expressing his sentiments. When he was presented to Queen Elizabeth he said: "Glad to meet you, Ma'am. Personally, I'm a Republican" . . . Queen Elizabeth replied: "We all are, in Scotland—but the English won't have it that way."

R. W. Thompson, the British war correspondent and travel writer—whose "Voice From the Wilderness" was published this week—visited the Argentine where Alberto Dodero, who is one of the wealthiest men in the country, invited him for a 7-day cruise on his yacht. Dodero and the other guests started a bridge game. Thompson avoided the game because his limited travel budget did not allow for card games with Argentine multimillionaires. On the sixth day of the cruise, however, Thompson was trapped into playing. He played nervously, fearful of each point lost. At the end of the game he was 800 points behind. He didn't know whether this represented $800 or $8000. Dodero and his wealthy friends made the tabulations and prepared the settlement. "At the rate at which we play," Dodero notified Thompson, "you've lost 80 cents."

In the forthcoming issue of the Ladies' Home Journal Eleanor Roosevelt replies to Jim Farley's having quoted her as saying, "Franklin finds it hard to relax with people who aren't his social equals." She says that the statement could never have been made by her "since I never have had such thoughts."

Collie Small, whose article on Lefty O'Doul appears in the current issue of the Sat, Eve. Post, needed an additional day of interviewing. O'Doul had invited Small to have their final session while playing golf together. "O'Doul shoots in the 70s, and his shots go straight down the center of the fairways," Small reports. "Mine go all over the place. I saw him only on the tees."

Ludwig Bemelmans, whose newest book is "Dirty Eddie," was a favorite guest at the home of the late Jules Bache. When Bache accused him of being a snob, Bemelmans confided: "Naturally I am a snob—having once been a headwaiter."

One of the most prosperous tailors in Las Vegas told a visitor last week how he had come to settle there. "I was passing through," he said, "and when I bought something, I received my change in silver dollars. I learned that when anybody changes a $5 bill and up, in Las Vegas, he gets change in silver dollars. So I knew I could make a living here—if only by sewing torn pockets."

Shallow Man

He is a shallow man who thinks . . . Of no one but himself . . . And keeps his capabilities . . . Upon a private shelf . . . Who never shares his heart and soul . . . With those who cross his path . . . That his accomplishments might have . . . A worthy aftermath . . . He is a shallow man who has . . . No kindness to bestow . . . No sunny smile or helping hand . . . When lamps are burning low . . . He must be very lonely as . . . He wanders on alone . . . Without a close companion or . . . A friend to call his own . . . And after he has closed the door . . . To life upon this sod . . . What will he have to offer as . . . He stands before his God?

GREATER SAVINGS

prevail on home furnishings in

The Hecht Co.'s Half Yearly Showing

of Furniture and Homewares

How can The Hecht Co. whittle prices down in face of rising costs? How can we afford to sell for only $199.95 high-fashion, luxury-priced living-suites you see in swank decorator magazines? How can we manage to bring you a rich, enduring Colonial Maple bedroom suite for just $127.95? How can we offer dropleaf tables for far less than what they sold for 6 months ago? The answer's as simple as ABC. Everybody agreed—it's plain good business sense to keep prices down. Manufacturers bent backwards to give us special values. The result—a Half-Yearly Showing of Furniture and Homewares—the likes of which you haven't seen in many a year. Hundreds of items marked at savings! Hundreds of better quality items made better . . . and for less money. A more brilliant round-up of Period and Modern furniture. A wider selection of sofas and chairs in the muslin. A more exciting line-up of decorator upholstery fabrics! Watch our daily newspaper ads for proof! Come in and browse around. See for yourself how much more you can buy for less at The Hecht Co.'s famous Half-Yearly event.
